WHS Topping Off Ceremony

WILMINGTON—As Town Manager Jeff Hull noted during his remarks, Wilmington is rounding third base and heading home.

State and local officials, faculty and administration, and students gathered on Alumni Field Tuesday to celebrate the Wilmington

High School Topping Off Ceremony, a ceremony traditionally held when workers place the last beam of a building under construction.

The project, though approved by Town Meeting in 2011 and having faced several delays, will be complete in February of next year. It's total cost is about $82.6 million, of which the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) is contributing 55.19 percent of eligible expenses.

Superintendent Joanne Benton, who will soon retire, called the new building a "great achievement."

"It will be the keystone of the community for many years to come," she said.

Treasurer and MSBA chairman Steve Grossman said the new building is a "wonderful project," and he lauded the leadership of Representative Jim Miceli, Senator Bruce Tarr, the Massachusetts School Building Authority, and local officials. He also signed the beam in memory of Sean Collier, the officer and Wilmington native allegedly killed by the Tsarnaev brothers following the Boston Marathon bombing last year.

WILMINGTON - Eight years after being listed on the national priorities list the Olin Superfund site is about to enter a new phase. A meeting slated for June 10 will offer the results of ongoing studies and give residents a chance to weigh in on upcoming steps, including clean-up plans.

The Olin site, located at 51 Eames Street, saw about thirty years of activity that contributed to the contamination of groundwater and land. Operations included discharge WILMINGTON - The end of the school year brings prompts sighs of relief from students and teachers alike, though often teachers begin to plan for the following year. One year, however, there is no next year to look forward to.

For a large contingent of Wilmington teachers, many of who have influenced multiple generations of Wilmington residents and families, the 2013-2014 school year is their final year. These venerated leaders in the district leave "wonderfully large shoes to fill" said Superintendent Benton. Their leadership and experience will be a terrible loss for Wilmington schools to bear in the future, but these teachers have acted as

WILMINGTON - This summer, Wilmington Firefighters will be participating in St. Baldrick's Day, a head-shaving event that raises money and awareness for Children's Cancer Research. The Firefighters are showing Wilmington's sense of community by doing this event in solidarity and support of a local boy and family, the Naimo's, affected by cancer.

"This is such a great cause, raising money for children having a tough time and cancer research," said Russ Stering, a Wilmington firefighter helping to organize the event. "Having people shave their heads is a sign of solidarity with the children who experience this all the time and is a nice bond. The WILMINGTON - A truck fire Monday afternoon brought a flurry of emergency activity to a quiet street near Silver Lake.

A recycling truck, out collecting curbside bins Monday afternoon, caught on fire on Grove Avenue at approximately 1:10 pm, said Deputy Fire Chief Donovan in an email. "The truck pulled to the curb and the driver noticed smoke coming from the engine compartment area," said Donovan, adding that the driver tried to extinguish the fire unsuccessfully.

When emergency crews arrived on the scene the front cab was "fully involved" as well as the nearby telephone pole.

Two Wilmington fire engines and one Tewksbury engine responded to the scene by Silver Lake. Wilmington Tower 1 also responded for manpower. North Reading Fire Department covered the station.

No injuries occurred and the truck's driver was checked out on the scene. Grove Ave. was closed for two and half hours as crews worked the scene. The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) was notified as well as a clean-up company.

Crews from Reading Municipal Light Company, cable, and telephone companies were also called to the scene to assess and repair damage.

Wilmington Department of Public Works and the Police Department also responded.

Ed Bradbury retires

Forty-one years honored by colleagues at event last week

By JON BISHOP
Town Crier Correspondent
Jon@YourTownCrier.com

WILMINGTON—Fire Chief Ed Bradbury is a man of few words.

At an event honoring his forty-one year service to the Town of Wilmington last Wednesday, he called his tenure "a hell of a ride."

"It's my dream. I got to live it," he said, adding that they're leaving the department to "a great guy," Rick McClellan.

And that was all he said.

Others there weren't so brief, and they all noted the impact that Bradbury has made on the town.

"I think it's time to express my best wishes for the Chief," said Town Manager Jeff Hull. "He's only been with the town for forty-one years."

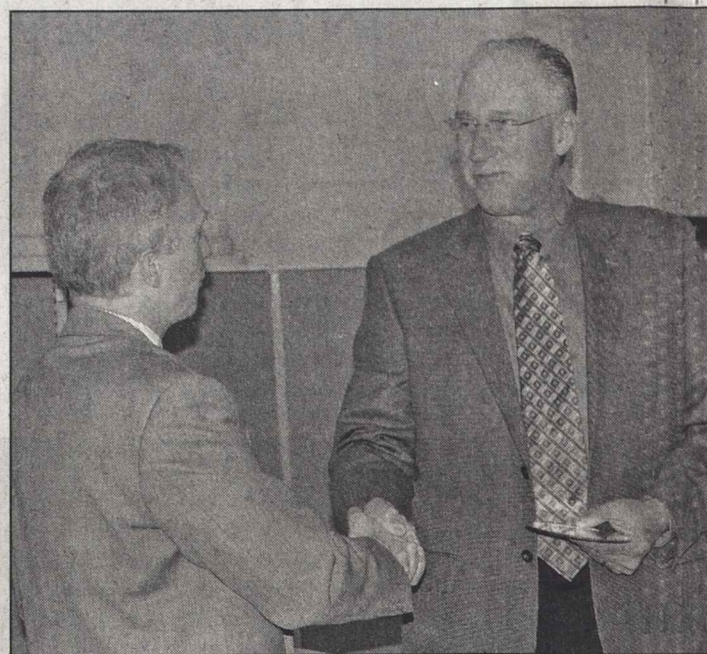

Hull said that he assumed Bradbury would be with the town for another ten and was surprised when he learned of his retirement.

Still, he said it was "really amazing...[to] think of the time Ed has spent here."

Bradbury, according to Hull, began with the Water Department, working as a firefighter only on a part-time basis.

But he soon realized that firefighting was a true passion. So he went full-time in the '70s.

As head of the firefighter union, Bradbury was "always looking for a solution," Hull said. And since Hull became Town Manager, "[Bradbury] has continued to help me."

Bradbury recently faced a test: the Avalon Oaks fire, which occurred in the middle of a severe winter storm and without a municipal water supply available. Bradbury drew on his ears of experience to deal with it.

Overall, he is a "skilled firefighter and a skilled leader," Hull said.

It's something different fire departments recognize, too—which is why Robert Pedrazzi, Ayer's Fire Chief, presented Bradbury with an award.

McClellan said he's "looking forward to the opportunity to serve the town," but he'll certainly miss working with Bradbury. After all, he had his first-ever run with him.

"It's been a pleasure to work with Eddy," he said. "He's taught me a lot of things."

"I've learned a lot from him," he added.

Normandy was his third invasion

Wilmington WWII veteran remembers service

Thursday marks the 70th anniversary of D-Day, the invasion of Normandy. It was the beginning of the end for the Nazi forces of Adolph Hitler. Hitler's Panzer troops had invaded France in 1940, and in June 1940, British forces had been forced to evacuate Dunkirk.

German troops controlled the European continent. Before long, Allied commanders determined that, in order to defeat Germany, they would have to invade the continent. And this meant preparing the shores for landing troops, a daunting task.

For Harvey Hudson, the landing was certainly harrowing and memorable, but it was not the first time he had been involved in such an operation. By the time D-Day took place, he had been a construction engineer in the First Amphibious Brigade for two years and had taken part in invasions of North Africa and Sicily.

Harvey was a young man in Medford, 23 years old at the time of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941. He was soon drafted and sent to Camp Edwards on Cape Cod. There he became a member of a new type of unit, the First Amphibious Brigade. The Amphibious Brigades became the only outfit in the U.S. Army to take part in the action in both the European and Far East theatres in World War II.

Three Amphibious Brigades served in Europe — the First, Fourth and Fifth. It was their job to land ahead of the troops and take care of demolition and construction problems. In those brigades, which on occasion had as many as 11,000 men, there were all types of servicemen: combat engineers, road builders, Navy personnel, signal corps, excavators, communications, demolition, etc. Harvey was a construction engineer.

From Camp Edwards, the First Amphib. shipped to Scotland, to the Rosneath Naval Base on the River Clyde. It was a British base, but it was essentially American. They spent the summer of 1942 at Rosneath.

In the fall, the company was put aboard a Dutch ship, which put out to sea. They didn't know it, but they were headed for North Africa — only it would be six or eight weeks before they would arrive. The First, along with other companies, were waiting for U.S. forces that were to land in North Africa. They waited and waited.

The landing finally took place on Nov. 8, 1942. The First Amphib went to Arzew, in Algeria, a small seaport near Oran with two forts. They landed with a British assault force, off a British ship. The British troops, though, all wore the American flag on their shoulders, because of anticipated difficulties with the Vichy French.

But the Americans soon learned that serving with the British, they had to eat British rations, not American fare.

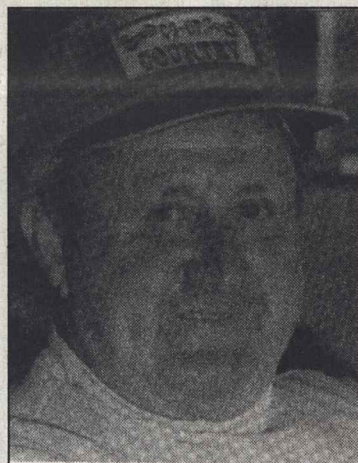

Behind Arzew is a high wall, call it a mountain. The French called it Monte De Lion. In a night operation on Mount De Lion, Harvey's company ran into another Allied battalion, and the two companies opened fire. Luckily, there were no casualties.

Harvey was in North Africa for a year. He went across country to Bizerte, in Tunisia, and then back to Algiers. It was in that city that he lost a truck, a 6 by 6, as it was called. He was at the Red Cross when someone drove off with it. It was found two days later. Losing a truck could be serious, but its swift recovery saved Harvey from a mess of trouble.

He went on to Maison Blanc, 30 miles west of Algiers for more training.

The battalion was loaded onto the USS Dickman and transported to Sicily. They landed in the first wave at Gela. It was, said Harvey, pretty good.

His company was assigned to serve with the British Eighth Army, which went up the east coast of Sicily and across into Italy.

With the British Eighth short of men, the Americans served as non-combatant engineers. They proceeded up the east coast of Italy as far as the Volturno River. Their job was to build bridges as needed, for the British.

It seemed that every night, the Germans would blow up the latest bridge. Then the next day, Harvey and the boys would build another. Finally, after about a month, the Americans were pulled out, and British engineers took their places.

Harvey was sent on to Naples. It was the only time he landed in the Mediterranean without being in combat readiness.

North of Naples is a large park-like area. There was a view across Naples Bay to Mount Vesuvius, a beautiful scene. Their outfit stayed in that park for several days, and then shipped out for Oran on a Liberty ship.

Then it was back to England. The First Amphib was getting ready for the D-Day assault. They were stationed in Cornwall, at the barracks of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. There were no British troops there at the time.

The 29th U.S. Division came in, fresh from the States, and the First Amphib was to serve with that division. The two groups, fresh soldiers vs. seasoned veterans, did not hit it off, except in fist fights.

The First Amphib stayed in England all winter, training for the coming invasion. They would march down to the beach, get in landing boats and go out in the channel. Then they would "invade" England.

On one such invasion, the German Navy sent in two E-Boats and sank some number of the landing barges. Some of the men killed were from the First Amphib.

Eventually they went to the beach near Torquay and put into a large hotel. From there, they were marched to a large stockade, a double stockade guarded by British MP's and also by American MP's. There was no getting out of that place, and unable to communicate with anyone.

They were loaded onto a British LCT, a large flat landing barge of the Royal Navy. They lived on canned pea soup, supplied by the Brits.

The 29th Division went in at Utah Beach, with the First Amphib landing at the southerly end of the beach. Harvey was driving a tractor, pulling a 57 mm. anti-tank gun. That gun was knocked out on the beach and Harvey, under intense machine-gunfire, dove into a foxhole.

There is a monument today, where the First Amphib landed.

The 29th went on to Holland, the First Amphib. with it. In Holland, the First Amphib. was detached, but Harvey stayed with the 29th to go into Germany and then on to Czechoslovakia. He was in that country when Germany surrendered on May 6, 1945.

General George Patton was in command, and for Harvey, Hudson, Patton was the best general. Patton, he says, was the smartest man he ever saw in the the U.S. Army.

Harvey recalls a review of the First Amphibious Brigade, at Mostaganem in Algeria. He recalls it with the pleasure of an old soldier.

Generals Eisenhower, Clark, and Patton took part in the review. All three men rode by in Jeeps as the men stood at attention. Eisenhower and Clark rode by without saying anything, but Patton had something to say to each company of men, as he passed. He could "build up" the troops with a few chosen words.

As he drove by Harvey's company, he said, "These are the finest looking troops I have ever seen." The men in that company never forgot Gen. Patton.

Today, in 2014, Harvey Hudson is 96, and still living at his home, bright, chipper, and full of memories.

TRANSPORTATION BENEFITS

When employers provide their employees with qualified transportation benefits—these are capped at $20 a month—those benefits can be excluded from the workers' gross income, creating a tax-free fringe. For instance, such an exclusion from income is allowed for a transit pass or fare card that entitles the worker to ride on mass transportation facilities, whether publicly owned or not.

There's also a qualified bicycle commuting reimbursement for reasonable expenses incurred by the employee to buy a bicycle, improve, repair or store it, along as the bike is regularly used for commuting to work. But a bike-share program would not qualify, the IRS ruled.

More on commuting: no matter how long a commute to the job may be—one worker claimed to travel 160 miles round trip a day—it does not qualify as a deductible personal business expense.

Is this a low-cost fringe benefit your company might choose? Talk it over with the business professionals at

Scouting

Getting to Eagle

WILMINGTON - Scott Robinson is the 68th Eagle Scout in Troop 56, made official at his Court of Honor ceremony on Saturday.

Scott joined Cub Scout Pack 361 as a Tiger Cub in 2003. After earning his Bobcat, Wolf, Bear, and Webelos badges, he crossed over and joined Boy Scout Troop 56 in 2008.

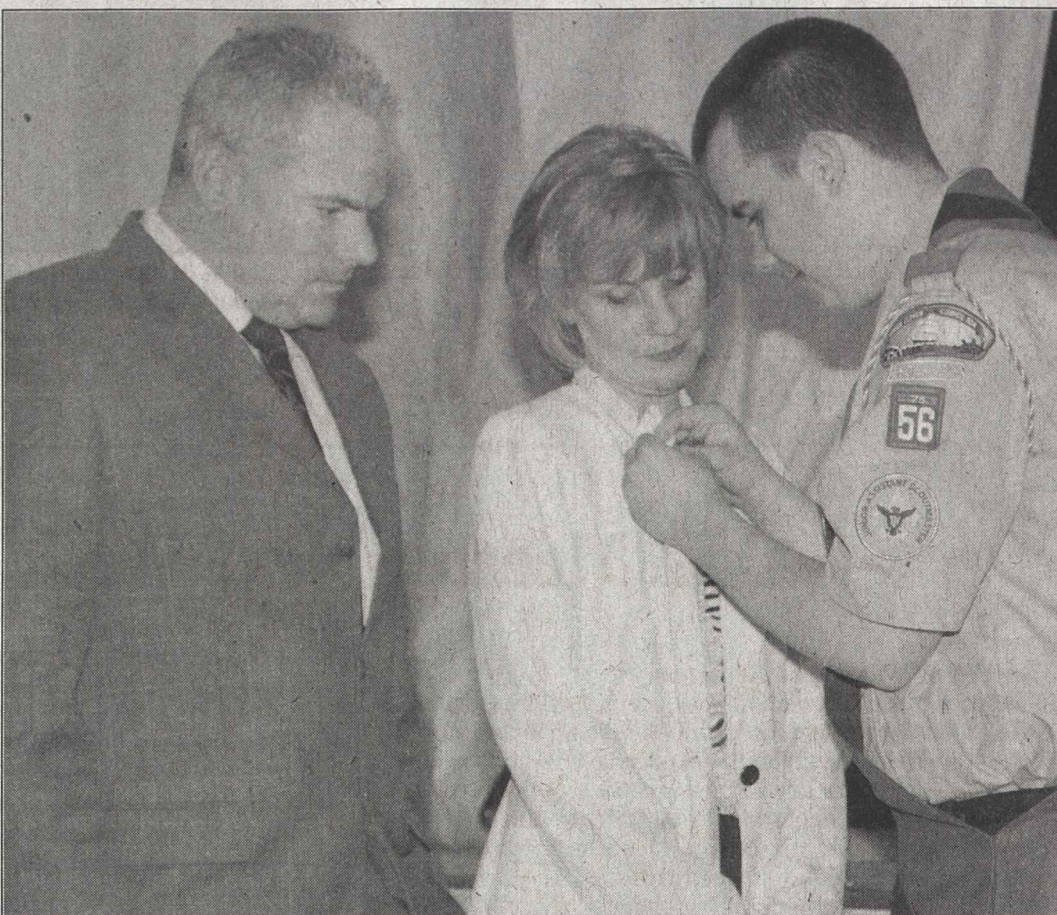

As a Boy Scout, Scott earned 26 merit badges, 12 of which were Eagle required, and successfully passed his Eagle Board of Review on February 20, 2014.

Scott's Eagle Project

Scott chose to give back to the community and his church for his Eagle Project.

The handicapped ramp at St. Thomas Church badly needed to be renovated. Scott, with the assistance of 46 volunteers, together donated 274 hours of time to renovate the handicapped ramp and the area surrounding it. The project consisted of cleaning and sanding the ramp, replacing rotted boards and all of the joist hangers, securing existing boards, priming and painting, disposing of all overgrowth surrounding the ramp, and spreading fresh stone under the ramp. Completion of this project has resulted in a functional handicapped ramp at St. Thomas Church.

Music Matters

Music is a moral law. It gives soul to the universe, wings to the mind, flight to the imagination, and charm and gaiety to life and to everything.

Plato

Over the last week I've had the privilege to be among those witnessing a rebirth of the arts in Tewksbury - through music and stage productions that not only captured an audience, but also showed the dedication of students, teachers, parents, and ultimately the town.

In Tewksbury last week I attended the all-school band concert. For you Wilmington folks, with your multiple, giant, (totally amazing) school concerts you may not be able to relate. But for Tewksbury people the bands from three schools fit in the TMHS gym, and all the parents, grandparents, and resident youth concert aficionados sat on one side. Easily.

But that's ok. Because the interest and participation in music is coming back. And it's huge. Tim Olevsky, the band teacher for the Ryan and the Wynn schools, allowed a few students an opportunity to do some conducting. I saw several students play multiple instruments. I saw solos starting in 5th grade, and they were good.

Friday night the Wynn School transformed into a fairly tale land for the Ryan School's production of Beauty and the Beast. These fifth and sixth graders sang, danced, acted, and completely blew my socks off. I can't carry a tune. I can't read a note of music. When it comes to music, I'm an artistic desert. Seeing these students thrive inspires.

The support of parents is essential, and it was there at all venues. The parents showed up, videotaped, took photos, brought flowers, painted sets, carried instruments, and did all those things to show their kids they care. Beauty and the Beast sold out both nights, and it wasn't all parents and grandparents.

The support of the community matters too.

If you were at the Memorial Day cemetery ceremony or parade you may have noticed the new band uniforms, which look outstanding.

Tewksbury is nurturing the arts more, and it's a great thing - not just for the future of the band and theater programs at the high school level, but also for the cultural depth of the community in general. No matter which town you live in (or perhaps visit from time to time) supporting the arts programs in all their forms makes a difference in the confidence of tomorrow's future leaders. The support for creative, original thought cannot be overestimated.

Olin Meeting Next Week Matters

Dear Fellow Wilmington Residents,

In support of your community please attend the upcoming meeting June 10th, 7:00 p.m. at the Middle School regarding the Olin Chemical Superfund Site. We have not had a meeting in couple of years due to the slow pace of the investigative process and the contamination related to this site. Most of the information that is needed to move forward with at least some remediation has been gathered and it is important for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to hear from the community. Or, at the very least, to know that our community cares about what happens in the future regarding this site. Hopefully the residents may also get an update from the Department of Public Health on the Childhood Cancer Study that has been pending since 1999.

For anyone not familiar with the Olin Site, it is located on the Woburn line off Eames Street. It is responsible for the contamination and shut down the Maple Meadow Brook water supply wells due to a chemical known as NDMA. There is a large plume of highly toxic contaminants that have spread in the groundwater from the site and have spread under ground for about a mile across Main Street to around the Town Park area. It has also contaminated private wells in the area. Eventually Olin wants to put a Trash Transfer Station at this site to which the Town has vehemently opposed for obvious reasons.

Our Town and many residents have spent countless hours and resources on dealing with this Site on behalf of the residents. We now need your support. The EPA has been very good over all and has worked fairly and cooperatively with us, and we are grateful. Still, the community needs to supply some pressure. For instance the EPA is poised to allow Olin to use industrial standards at the site for levels of contaminants in the soil even though it has been a long standing policy of the EPA in the northeast region to use residential standards because so many of these site are near residents like in Wilmington.

The message should be - "We want the most protective standards period! We deserve nothing less after what this site has cost our Town!" The EPA gets lots of push back and pressure from Olin. For Olin it is nothing more than about their bottom line. For Wilmington it is about our lives. We need to push back also.

For those of us that have been working on this Site for close to 15 years on behalf of our community your participation means a lot. We know how important it is to show the EPA that we care. You don't have to speak or do anything. Just being there sends the right message. But if you have questions, this is the time to ask. It may not be an exciting meeting, but it will be informative and an important one. So please take a little time out of your schedules to attend.

Thank you so much in advance and we look forward to seeing you there.

Summer concerts make big impacts

Music is everywhere. You can buy CDs of waves crashing on the shore to soothe you into a restful sleep. And of course my friends love to attend concerts and "brag" about how wonderfully loud the music was.

At concerts where the music is really loud, the sound waves "vibrate" your skeletal frame and can give you adrenalin "high". My professor in graduate school earned his doctorate degree proving that the baby toe vibrates to sound waves. Wow! Who would have thought this was true?

National Public Radio did a survey last fall asking concert goers if the music was too loud, and if they wore hearing protection. According to the author, Bob Boilen, 71 percent of respondents said the music was too loud. However, only 52 percent said they wear hearing protection at concerts. Twenty six percent said they hate hearing protection, and would not wear them.

Concert music is notoriously loud. The music levels can reach 100-110 decibels. Interestingly, the Occupations Safety and Health Administration guidelines apply to concert venues, but they do not consider concert venues, clubs and nightclubs to be a hazardous environment. Because of the shortage of inspectors, and the designation of a non-hazardous environment, these venues are never inspected.

According to the OSHA standards, persons can be exposed to noise at 90dB for 8 hours. However, for every 5 dB over 90dB, they have to cut the exposure by half. For example, if a noise level was 100 dB a person can be exposed to only 2 hours a day.

However, The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) disagrees with OSHA. They recommend a limit of 85dB per eight hours of exposure and a 3dB exchange rate. Therefore at 100dB loudness level, they recommend only 15 minutes of exposure. Most concerts last two to three hours. Many concert attendees complain about tinnitus or ringing in their ears following concerts. Most enjoy the music and don't think about the damage they may be doing to their hearing.

Hearing protection can be custom made by an audiologist. They can be made in many colors and tend to be more comfortable than the over the counter variety. However, the over the counter variety can be re-used and provide protection. Try hearing protection. It works!

Notes from WCTV

'Book Stew' on the menu at free brunch

WILMINGTON - For June, WCTV's show "Book Stew" will highlight Eileen MacDougall's visit to The Career Place in Woburn for World Book Night 2014, and her March "Book Talkin" program at the Wilmington Memorial Library.

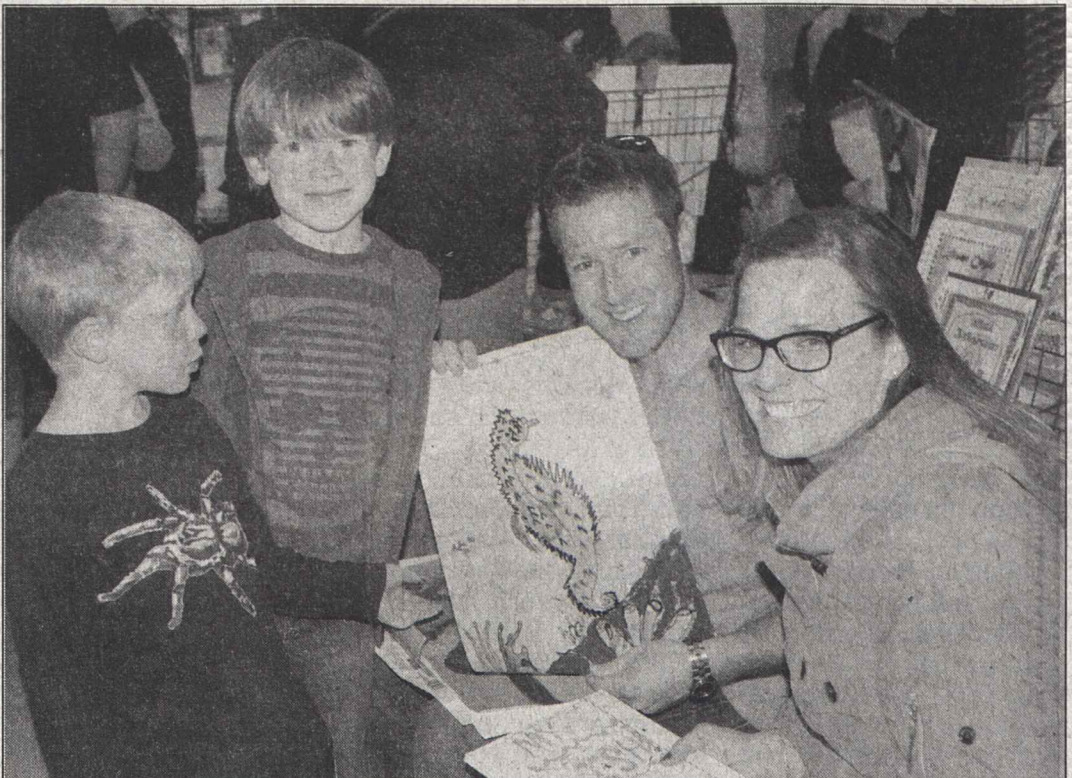

World Book Night (WBN), held on April 23, 2014, featured a planet-wide 500,000 copy free book giveaway. The purpose of the WBN program is to encourage non-readers to dip into an enjoyable book and then to hopefully be intrigued enough to try another and then to be converted into an avid reader. All authors and publishing companies donate free copies. In her application to be a WBN Book Giver, Eileen cited the fine work of the staff of The Career Place during her period of unemployment.

Eileen invites all readers (and eaters) to join her at the Summer Reading Program Book Brunch on Saturday, June 14th at 10 AM at the Wilmington Memorial Library.

Reserve your place online at <http://www.wilmlibrary.org/civcirm/event/info?reset=1&id=508>

In the works for future "Book Stew" shows are the series' first local author interview, and a visit to a Brookline book store to meet their in house book club.

The June show can be viewed on WCTV on Thursday June 5th at 5 PM, Tuesday June 10th at 1 PM, Thursday June 12th at 7 AM and 7 PM and Saturday June 14th at 2 PM, with the same schedule repeating throughout the month.

American Legion Happenings

The Memorial Day Parade and Ceremony was a success. Post 136 Color Guard was looking sharp, and The Scouts did a great job at the cemetery with flags and flowers, and the parade. Our Veteran's Agent, Lou Cimaglia did a great job with the organization of the parade and ceremonies. We should always remember those who have fallen, those who have served and those who are on active duty, on days such as this.

Post 136 does have two active duty members, Adam Campbell, NAVY and Casey Herra, MARINES. Keep them in your thoughts. The Town of Wilmington should be proud.

Post Elections are coming up. There will be nominations at the next meeting, June 18, 2014 at 7:00PM. Elections will be held the following Saturday, June 21, 2014 at 10:00AM. Please try to be there. We need more people to step up and fill some of the offices.

Many thanks, to Boy Scout Troop 136 for cleaning up the grounds around the Post on Memorial Day Weekend.

Great job guys, and also, a big High Five for making the trek to Concord, on Patriots Day.

For those of you, who enjoy Country music; check out our own Mike Kelley, alias "Cowboy Mike", at "Wilmington's Got Talent" on June 8th.

Post 136 will be teaming up with The Wilmington Minutemen at The Harnden Tavern on Flag Day, June 17th for a flag retirement ceremony at 6:00PM. If you have any flags in disrepair drop them by The Post and

Food drive collects 11.5 tons

Dear Editor:

I am writing on behalf of the Tewksbury Community Pantry board of directors and the many people served by our pantry. The board wishes to express its deep appreciation for all the support generously given the pantry during this year's National Association of Letter Carriers food drive.

Thanks to the support of many residents who generously left food by their mailbox, our media, municipal government, and local businesses who publicized the event, our many volunteers who return year after year to sort and store food, and our Tewksbury based letter carriers who tirelessly picked up and delivered donated food during their rounds, the pantry realized an astonishing 23,000 pounds of food to be distributed in coming months to those in our community who need food assistance. This amount is a staggering 37% increase over last year and represents an all time high in Tewksbury. While we are not surprised by this incredible level of support because we've seen Tewksbury rise to the occasion time and time again, the result reflects a community-wide effort our entire town should be proud of. It underscores yet again that your Tewksbury Community Pantry is truly a community pantry.

On behalf of those who benefit directly from this generosity, we extend our heartfelt appreciation to all who made this food drive such a resounding success and thank you for all your continued support.

On Behalf of the Board of a Directors,
Todd Johnson
Director

Exciting summer performance opportunity for high school students

Taking risks, challenging artists to do their best work, tackling new musicals and acclaimed plays, and working on complex subject matter are not concepts that are always associated with theatre programs for kids.

However, Stoneham Theatre's young company is known for exactly those things. In particular, the act 3 program for students in grades 10-12 attracts many of its students because it gives them the opportunity to perform in shows they might not be able to do at their own school or in other extracurricular programs.

Stoneham Theatre's act 3 students have performed in shows such as Columbus (recently seen at ArtsEmerson in Boston), the new musical Winesburg, Ohio, an original adaptation of Grimm's The Handless Maiden, and the challenging LaChiusa musical Bernarda Alba. And that's just within the past four years.

This summer will be no different. act 3 students who participate in the young company Summer Festival 2014 will be cast in one of 3 productions: the hilarious crowdpleaser Monty Python's Spamalot, the second-ever production of the female-centered new musical Picnic at Hanging Rock by Daniel Zaitchik, or the challenging and exciting Mary Zimmerman (The Book, Metamorphoses) play, Argonautika.

Beginning on July 11, 2014, act three students will spend five weeks rehearsing, and their work will culminate in three public performances on Stoneham Theatre's stage, August 15-18, 2014.

In addition to rehearsals, all students take four workshops throughout the Summer Festival. Stoneham Theatre hires professional artists to teach these workshops.

This summer, they are lucky to have such theatre practitioners as Jen Alison Lewis, Sam Richert, Sara Gadowicz, and rLee Adams teaching classes like movement, fight choreography, Shakespeare, Gender in performance, and devised theatre. It is an intensive and rigorous program with professional quality results, but the students also have a great time.

Enrollment is ongoing for the young company Summer Festival 2014, and space is still available for students entering grades 10-12 and 2014 high school graduates, as well as students entering grades 1-3.

AG Coakley sues Fannie and Freddie for refusal to engage in foreclosure buyback programs

Saying its refusal to engage in foreclosure buyback programs is unfairly and illegally causing Massachusetts families to lose their homes, Attorney General Martha Coakley has sued the Federal Housing Finance Agency (FHFA) and the mortgage giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac for violating the state's 2012 foreclosure prevention law.

Filed today in Suffolk Superior Court, the complaint alleges that Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, currently under FHFA conservatorship, refuse to comply with the August 2012 Massachusetts law, An Act to Prevent Unnecessary and Unreasonable Foreclosures. The first-in-the-nation law was proposed by AG Coakley and passed by the Legislature in response to the foreclosure crisis in an effort to prevent unnecessary foreclosures. Among other provisions, it prohibits creditors from blocking home sales to non-profits simply because the non-profit intends to resell the property back to the former homeowner.

One example of a buyback program, as cited in the complaint, is Boston Community Capital's (BCC) "Stabilizing Urban Neighborhoods" Initiative (SUN).

As part of the program, the organization buys foreclosed, bank-owned homes at their present market value and sells the properties back to the original homeowners if they qualify for affordable financing. Buyback programs like SUN prevent needless displacement of families that through an arrangement with a non-profit can afford to stay in their homes. Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac have continued to block buybacks even though they lose money in the process.

Since 2012, AG Coakley has encouraged principal reduction by Fannie and Freddie as a critical foreclosure prevention tool. In an April 2012 letter to then-Acting FHFA Director Edward DeMarco, AG Coakley was joined by 10 other Attorneys General urging Fannie and Freddie to permit principal reduction in loan modifications. Despite a change in leadership, Fannie and Freddie continue to prohibit principal reduction.

AG Coakley sent another letter last month to FHFA's new Director, Melvin Watt, stating that the current policies are in direct conflict with Massachusetts law and represent an economic loss for taxpayer-owned Fannie and Freddie.

In the complaint, filed today and citing the case Suero v. Freddie Mac, AG Coakley alleges that two of FHFA's policies violate state law. Fannie and Freddie's "arm's length transaction" policy prohibits property sales to non-profits who resell to the original homeowner. The "make whole" policy has the same effect, as it prevents Fannie and Freddie from accepting anything less than the outstanding loan amount from the former homeowner or anyone seeking to resell or rent to the former homeowner.

Both SUN and the 2012 law were cited in a decision by the U.S. District Court to issue a preliminary injunction in Suero v. Freddie Mac, preventing the foreclosure and sale of the Suero's home in Dorchester. The decision also referenced a February 2013 letter the AG's office sent to FHFA explaining that Massachusetts law now explicitly forbids banks and other servicers from rejecting offers from legitimate buyback programs merely because the property will be resold to the former homeowner.

A Memorial Day Tribute to the Fallen

By JESSICA GUIDA
TMHS Student

TEWKSBURY - With Memorial Day in their sights, the Tewksbury Memorial High School AP US History students have been dedicating their time to honoring some of the brave men and women who have lost their lives fighting for the United States of America.

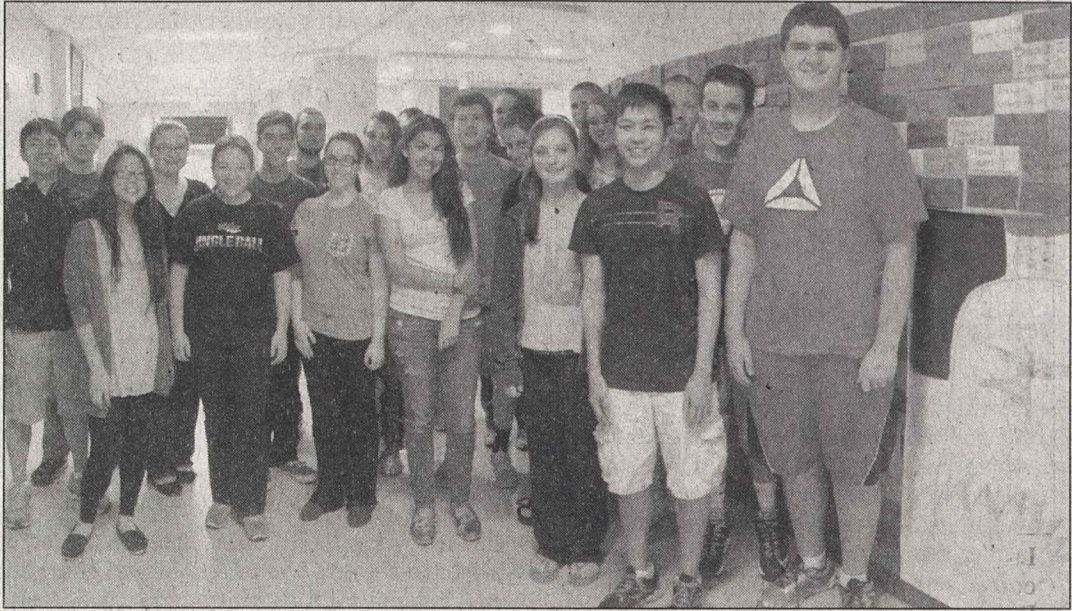

Under the advisement of their teacher, Ms. Dustine Puma, the students have taken this seven-year-old tradition from the old TMHS building, and given it a home in the new one. The names of 6,987 fallen soldiers, from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, each have been written out and displayed in the building. This tribute reminds everyone that while these members of the armed forces may have fallen, their sacrifice will always be remembered.

Memorial Day is a day on which those who died in active military service are honored and remembered. Although we can never repay them for their contribution to this country, Ms. Puma and her students are choosing to honor these men and women in a simple, but effective way.

This exhibit of almost 7,000 names is not only heart-wrenching, but eye opening. Many courageous soldiers do lose their lives because they choose to protect this country, and ensure that the citizens of the United States of America can safely live in a free country.

On Memorial Day, and the days that follow, the heroic actions of the 6,987 people written on the wall of the Tewksbury Memorial High School will be appreciated and never forgotten.

WHS Seniors give back in service project

WILMINGTON - This year Wilmington High School's Class of 2014 decided to devote the last day of their "Senior Week" to completing a community service project for the Town of Wilmington. Many of the students felt they wanted to give back to the community that has supported them throughout their educational careers. It was a great compliment to the Scholarship Awards Ceremony held later that evening.

The Class Advisors, Michelle Hooper and Tracey Kassin, and Class Officers worked with Superintendent Joanne Benton and Superintendent of Public Buildings George Hooper to develop a plan for this day.

"We were shocked by the number of students that signed up to participate in this event of Senior Week. These students had fulfilled their graduation requirements and really just wanted to do something good for the community with their friends," said Kassin. "It was incredibly inspiring to watch them dive into projects. Ten girls rushed to take on the responsibility to paint The Book Store Next Door. They weren't afraid to get their hands dirty or climb ladders. This project took the longest, but the group stayed late to finish. They had pride in their work and that is something they must have learned not just from Wilmington Public Schools but also from their families and friends. It was a great send off for the Class of 2014 that showed the value of community and service in the Town of Wilmington."

There were so many students that signed up they were able to take on three projects.

One group scraped and painted the rock shaped "W" in Student Parking Lot. Another group worked inside and outside the Senior Center on various projects. The final group headed over The Book Store Next Door to finish painting the building. They couldn't have asked for better weather as they split up in groups to tackle these projects.

The students were led by class officers Craig Smith (President), Michael DiLorenzo (Vice-President), Anthony Vitale (Treasurer), Melanie Reagan (Secretary) and Sylvan Huynh (Public Relations) and included a mixture of student leaders from academics, sports and clubs.

Corps," said Governor LePage. "The Maine Conservation Corps has done tremendous work making positive changes to our great State and Nation."

Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry (DACF) Commissioner Walt Whitcomb also welcomed back Martin, and highlighted the important work that the MCC does on behalf of

Maine citizens. "As part of the DACF, the MCC's four-fold mission is to: accomplish conservation projects, create conservation employment, provide conservation education, and engage conservation volunteers," said Whitcomb. ### eBay breach leads to AG warning

Better password practices to use now

BOSTON - Following a notification from eBay that it experienced a cyberattack that compromised a database containing user information, including encrypted passwords, Attorney General Martha Coakley reminds consumers to use secure password practices when using the internet, and to be vigilant against phishing attempts. The AG's Office is also working with other states to closely monitor the situation.

"The eBay compromise serves as a reminder that internet users should be vigilant to help safeguard their personal information," AG Coakley said. "Consumers can increase the security of their information online by adopting strong passwords, using different passwords across the various internet sites they visit, and being cautious in providing their confidential information to others."

This week, eBay notified the AG's Office that one of its user databases was compromised in a cyberattack. According to eBay, the database contained eBay users' full names, e-mail addresses, physical addresses, phone number, dates of birth, and encrypted user passwords. eBay has informed the AG's Office that no user financial data or confidential personal information was affected, and that it has found no evidence that its PayPal databases were involved.

Nonetheless, AG Coakley warns consumers that scammers may try to use consumers' non-confidential information (such as a phone number or email address) to "phish" confidential and financial information from the consumer by posing as a representative from a legitimate website, business, bank, or retailer, or as an IT administrator.

AG Coakley provides the following tips on how consumers can help increase the security of their passwords online and avoid becoming a victim of a phishing attempt:

•Do not use obvious passwords. When selecting a password, avoid the obvious, such as personal information

(e.g. names, birthdates, addresses), the name of the website or service you access through the password (e.g. "ebay"), or other commonly used passwords that are easy for others to guess.

•Complex is better. The more characters in a password, the harder it is to crack. Many internet sites require that your password be a certain length, but when you have a choice, adopt a password that is at a minimum 8 characters long, and use numbers and symbols in addition to letters.

•Use a secret code. One way to create a password that is both strong and easy to remember is to build one using a letter from each word of a favorite phrase (e.g. "Old MacDonald Had a Farm E-I-E-I-O" would become "omhafaieio"). Other strategies include using symbols or numbers in place of some letters.

•Do not share passwords. Keep your password to yourself; sharing passwords increases the risk of your account being accessed by others.

•Use different passwords for different online services. Do not use the same password for multiple internet sites, especially banking websites, as it increases your exposure to identity theft or fraud.

•Change passwords frequently. It is a good idea to change your passwords frequently to decrease the amount of time someone can use your password successfully. Changing passwords every 30-90 days is good practice.

•Avoid Getting "Phished." Be suspicious of any request (usually by phone, mail, or e-mail) for your personal information that you did not initiate or are not expecting. If someone requests your personal information (e.g. a call from your "bank" to "verify" your account), always verify their identity before providing it to them - ask for their name, organization, phone number, and address. Confirm this information through an outside source, such as the company's website, customer service representative, or a telephone directory. Additionally, be careful when asked to open attachments or click on hyperlinks within an e-mail from an address you do not recognize or are not expecting.

The Golden Rule has always guided the owners and staff at Tewksbury Funeral Home. Caring for and guiding the family of a loved one who has passed is the most important part of our service.

A family of service minded people intent on helping the community in many ways, the Deputat family has helped charter and is a member of several civic organizations in Tewksbury.

When one visits the funeral home one is steeped in the town's history. The building was built over a century ago and has been in the family well over half that time. Lovingly restored and improved by hand by Walter Deputat, the facility is designed to accommodate large and small gatherings, all in the comfort of our up-to-date building.

We invite families to contact us in time of need or for preplanning. We are dedicated to providing the very best facilities, a full range of merchandise, and the finest funeral services at a reasonable cost.

We are committed to serving Tewksbury and the surrounding towns with compassionate services at a cost that only a family owned provider can offer.

Our goal is to not only to meet, but to exceed, our client expectations.

What next for Olin Superfund Site?

of waste into open sludge lagoons beginning in the mid 1950's to the 1980s.

EPA Remedial Project Manager Jim DiLorenzo says "it was perfectly acceptable practice, at the time. It wasn't negligence."

A couple of drums stored in a containment area also ruptured during that period, but DiLorenzo states that the majority of the contamination came from the waste lagoons.

The EPA began further study several years ago to plug data gaps, to narrow the list of 242 contaminants to those that pose the greatest risk, and to determine the extent of the plume.

The EPA approved a settlement with Potentially Responsible Parties (PRP) on June 28, 2007 identifying the Olin Corporation, which owned the site from 1980 to the present, the Stepan Company, which owned from 1968 to 1980, and American Biltrite, Inc, which owned the property prior to 1980.

Of the chemicals discharged into the groundwater, such as Opex, Kempore, formaldehyde, and hydrazine, created a chemical reaction in the Maple Meadow Brook aquifer, leading to the discovery of N-Nitrosodimethylamine (NDMA), also known as dimethylnitrosamine (DMN), a semi-volatile organic chemical, in 4 of the 5 wells in the Maple Meadow Brook.

"Out of the hundreds of chemicals that we detected there, the one that remains of the highest concern is the NDMA," said DiLorenzo in a call with the Town Crier last week. The NDMA discovery led to the shut down of those well fields, which previously supplied 60 percent of the town's water.

At the June 10 informational meeting, DiLorenzo will offer an update on the site, now that most of the fieldwork required by a 2009 settlement with the PRPs is completed.

"Now we have answers and we will be presenting the results of all that effort," said DiLorenzo. "We've pretty much nailed down the areas of contamination and we'll be explaining what we found on the property."

DiLorenzo also plans to discuss the groundwater pilot treatment system installed in late 2012 and running since 2013. The results of that system represent a "significant step forward toward developing final groundwater cleanup options."

While residents may feel the work has dragged, DiLorenzo emphasizes that for the past several years a lot of behind the scenes fieldwork, including evaluations, risk assessments, are necessary before final cleanup options may be drafted.

DiLorenzo also plans to discuss the private well sampling program, underway since 2009. Some of the private wells found have shown low concentrations of NDMA, and the EPA requires Olin to monitor those wells quarterly.

Perhaps most important to DiLorenzo is the opportunity to engage the community at this meeting, especially as the project is about to turn a corner from investigation to remediation.

"We are looking to implement a remedy with community input," he said, noting that at past meetings usually about fifty residents turn out. "They will have a voice. I want people to show up when we have hearings, to come out and be active, participate in the process. It will be a good test on June 10."

Next Steps

Suzanne Sullivan, Vice-Chair of WERC.

DiLorenzo will talk to the community about how the process moves forward. Following the completion of the risk assessments, a proposed clean-up plan will be generated and multiple options will be presented to the community. The residents will have an opportunity to offer feedback both verbally and in writing on what they like, don't like, and even give ideas the EPA didn't previously consider.

The site includes multiple clean-up elements including the property, the sediment surface water, and groundwater. The final plan, one with EPA and residents will wrestle with, must decide whether to do one comprehensive clean-up on the property to do the work in segments.

"Groundwater is far more complicated, so do we want to wait until that is done, or move forward with the property and realize that groundwater takes longer?" posits DiLorenzo, who notes that the Wilmington Environmental Restoration Committee (WERC) honed in on that issue.

"WERC wants to see everything done together, when it comes to the clean-up," said Suzanne Sullivan, Vice-President of WERC. "The groundwater is the most important aspect of the site, it wouldn't be a Superfund site without the groundwater contamination, and thus, the groundwater remediation has to be the driving force behind this project."

A separate issue depends on the outcome of the EPA studies - the future of a proposed truck-to-rail solid waste transfer facility proposal on the Olin property currently sitting before the Surface Transportation Board. The New England Transrail proposal, if passed, could route thousands of tons of garbage and other solid waste through Wilmington on trucks for loading onto railcars, and potentially without any local or state control or limitations. Since the EPA controls the site, WERC wants to know the agency's posture on future uses of the Olin site, particularly in light of a solid waste proposal on an already contaminated site.

"The community deserves to have a beneficial use of that property. It is a slap in the face that Olin wants to turn that site into a trash transfer station," said Sullivan. "There is nothing in there for us, nothing at all."

Ultimately, the future of the Olin land, and the Transrail proposal, are inextricably linked with the Superfund process. The community has an opportunity to be part of that future, by participating in the June 10 meeting, as well as upcoming hearings.

"This is a comprehensive process, it is deliberate, and because of that, it's lengthy. Lots of stakeholders are involved," explained DiLorenzo. "It takes some time to work through, but we will get to the right decision, I'm pretty confident of that."

mentors and have "passed the torch" to the next generation of educators, said Peggy Kane.

Some of these teachers were among the longest tenured in Wilmington history. Topping out the list at an incredible 49 years—meaning he first started teaching in 1965, four years before the lunar landing and comfortably in the middle of the British Invasion, years before anything resembling the internet would come to schools, and when the memory of granting statehood to Alaska and Hawaii were fresh in the minds of Americans—was Richard Fardy. Fardy, a polymath, has focused on science education for his career, teaching courses as diverse as Biology, Chemistry, and Anatomy and Physiology.

Superintendent Benton made it a point to let the teachers know just how valued each of them were to Wilmington, pausing to speak to each individual's accolades. The retirees are at every level, from support staff to principal, but regardless of their position the entire school committee rose to applaud their careers and a standing ovation lasted several minutes.

The names of the retirees are as follows, in alphabetical order. Sandra Arciero, grade three teacher, Woburn Street School. Robert Appolloni, Principal of the Shawsheen Elementary. Judith Beaudet, Special Education Teacher at the Wilmington High School and West Intermediate School. Wendy Bengar, Reading Teacher, Grade Eight Language Arts teacher at the North Intermediate School and the Wilmington Middle School, as well as Explorer Team Leader at the Middle School. Susan Canty, Business Teacher at the Wilmington High School. Barbara Crockett, Special Education Teacher at the Wilmington High School, North Intermediate School, West Intermediate School and Wilmington Middle School. Richard Fardy, Science Teacher at the Wilmington High School as well as Science Team Leader. Brenda Galvin, Librarian at the Wilmington Middle School and North Intermediate School. Cynthia Jones, Kindergarten Teacher at the Boutwell Early Childhood Center and Kindergarten Aide at the Wildwood School. Lee Keating, Educational Assistant at the Wilmington Middle School. Joseph Kleponis, English Teacher and Wilmington

Teacher Association President who taught at the High School, North Intermediate and West Intermediate School and taught Reading at the Shawsheen Elementary School. Marylou Lackett, Grade One and Grade Three teacher at the Woburn Street School. Pamela Lavochkin, Reading Specialist at the Shawsheen Elementary School, Special Education teacher at the Shawsheen Elementary School, the Woburn Street School, the North intermediate School, West Intermediate School and Wilmington High School. Mary Lou McManus, Secretary at the Wilmington High School and the West Intermediate School, Teacher Aide at the West Intermediate School. Joanne Miles, Reading Specialist at the Shawsheen Elementary School. Nancy Pizzotti, Grade Four teacher at the West Intermediate School. Sandra Roketenetz, Payroll Specialist for Wilmington Public Schools. Jean Zwicker, Special Education Chairperson for Wilmington Public Schools.

The Town Crier salutes these educators for their commitment to the families of Wilmington and wishes them well on all future endeavors.

Part of something special

Grossman also spoke with the Crier before the proceedings began. He said that the school represents 21st century education, demonstrates that Wilmington is "at the heart of the innovation economy," and that the town has a vision.

Students at the new high school can "become winners in the innovation economy," as the new building will foster the arts in addition to allowing students to study science and technology.

Jack McCarthy, the Executive Director of the MSBA, said that the state is "heavily invested as your partner here," and Senator Tarr said that the high school project has "been marked throughout its history by persistence."

Representative Miceli said that his three children all graduated from Wilmington schools. They received a great education, he said. That'll continue with the new building.

"This town has made a great investment," he said. "I can't wait to walk through the new building."

Last to speak was Mike Marcella of Gilbane, the construction management firm. Earlier, Town Manager Hull called the tradesmen and women who worked on the project

"unsung heroes" and Benton said that they all had become part of the Wilmington family.

Marcella agreed. He said that the final beam represents a component of a larger whole—just as he is part of a team.

He couldn't have done it without his fellow crewmembers, he said, and he also praised the town.

"We knew [back in 2011] that we were part of something special," he said.

After that, they raised the beam, bringing the high school one step closer home base, one step closer to opening.

Wilmington's (soon-to-be) Bald Firefighters!

Wilmington Firefighters cause is much more personal now as we have a child in town, who is very close with one of the lieutenants. The Naimo's are returning today from Florida on a Make a Wish Foundation trip and are excited for the event next Saturday where Anthony's dad will be shaving his head in solidarity with his son and other kids with cancer. I am also very excited to announce we hit the $9,000 fundraising mark today!"

Anthony Naimo, a 10-year-old Wilmington resident, currently receives treatment for PH+ ALL (Philadelphia Chromosome Positive, Acute Lymphoblastic Leukemia). Anthony is the son of Mike Naimo, a Wilmington Water Department worker.

The 'shavees' are 14

Wilmington Firefighters including two Lieutenants, as well as 18 volunteers. More people will be signing up between now and the event.

On Saturday June 14, the Firefighters are hosting a Fundraiser for St. Baldrick's Day at the Red Heat Tavern, 300 Lowell Street in Wilmington. From 1:00-5:00pm, a portion of each diner's bill will be donated to the Children's Cancer Research. There will also be raffles, including prizes such as gift certificates to Red Heat Tavern and Honeydew Donuts, Red Sox tickets and an autographed sports photo.

To donate, dine in at the Red Heat Tavern on June 14 or visit: <http://www.stbaldricks.org/events/wfd1370>

After beating Arlington, team falls to Masconomet

Wildcats eliminated in Quarterfinals

By JAMIE POTE

BOXFORD - Coming off its first state tournament win in four years, the Wilmington High School Baseball team's tremendous season came to a screeching halt on Saturday afternoon. The No. 2 seed Masconomet Chieftains blanked the Wildcats, 4-0, in a Division 2 North Quarterfinal game played at Masconomet Regional High School.

With the win, the old Cape Ann League rivals move on to the semi-finals to face Dracut. Masco defeated Danvers in last year's sectional final. With the loss, the No. 7 seed Wildcats finish the season with an overall record of 14-8, which included winning the Middlesex League Freedom Division for the second time in three years as well as the Scanlon Memorial Tournament for the first time in 13 years and topping league rival Arlington 1-0 in a first round tourney game at home on Thursday.

Wilmington's bats were extremely quiet on Saturday. The Wildcats managed just four hits and struck out 11 times, while its last four batters were a combined 0-for-11. Wilmington left a runner at second base with one out in the first, before 15-of-the-next-16 batters were retired. The 'Cats showed some fight in the last two innings with three hits and a walk but again couldn't break the shut out.

Masco's Will Tuss, the team's No. 2 starter, tossed the complete game shut out and was in complete control all game long. He walked just one batter and featured a solid fastball and mixed in a slow curve when needed to keep Wilmington's batters off-balance.

"We battled but we left too many strikes out there," said Wildcat coach Aldo Cairra. "When you only swing at one pitch and you're down 0-2 right away, it puts you in a big hole and gives the other guy the advantage. We were trying to tell them to sit on the fastball. I don't know if it was nerves or what it was Wilmington High Senior Third Baseman Jimmy Davey (9) gets congratulated by his teammates Brian Cavanagh and Jackson Gillis, while catcher Tyler Stillings joins the party after Davey made a terrific diving play to throw out a runner to end the top of the seventh during last Thursday's first round state tournament win. but we just couldn't pull the string. That was the whole thing - we struck out way too much. But we got to (Twiss) and rallied a bit (in the late innings) but we couldn't get the timely hits we needed."

Senior Jimmy Davey struck a one-out double to the left center gap with one out in the top of the first but was stranded there after the next two batters were retired. Wilmington's starting pitcher Mike Curtis came out with guns blazing in the bottom of the first striking out the side.

Wilmington went in order in the top of the second before Masco put the game away with three runs in the bottom half. After a single and a RBI double, things seem to get away from Curtis, who was uncharacteristically wild, walking four batters in the inning, between two more strikeouts and a fly out with the bases loaded to get out of the jam. But the RBI double and two bases loaded walks gave Masco the 3-0 lead.

"Mike didn't have his best stuff," said Cairra. "He struggled that one inning and settled down after that. He struck out the three batters in the first inning and I thought we would be in for a real battle. I think he got a little shaken up after the first two hitters got hits off of him in that second inning and then I think he got away from his game plan."

"We were told that this team was a very good fast-ball hitting team and in the first inning he threw a lot of breaking balls and struck them all out the side and I think he got away from that a bit in the second inning and then just lost confidence in his curveball after that.

"But still, you have to score runs in order to win games and we didn't today. We scored just one run in 14 innings and we got our clutch hits when we needed them on Thursday and we couldn't get a clutch hit today."

Curtis gave up one run the rest of the way on a RBI double in the bottom of the sixth. All in all, he gave up four earned runs on five hits while walking six, hitting a batter and striking out eight over six innings of work.

Twiss had retired 15-of-16 batters, but with one out and the bases empty in the top of the sixth, Wilmington made him a bit nervous, and tired. Evan Raffi walked and moved to second on a single to left field by Davey. Curtis followed with a slow infield hit to shortstop, but on the play Raffi took a wide turn at third and Elias Varinos made a quick throw to third to get Raffi for the second out in the inning. Jackson Gillis followed with a groundball out to end the threat.

In the top of the seventh, Corey Stillings led off with a single to left and was stranded at first after the next three batters all flied out to end the game.

Wilmington will lose six seniors off its 14-win season including five starters, Curtis (p/1b), Stillings (catcher), Davey (3B) and outfielders Ryan Carroccio and Jimmy Murphy, as well as Vinny Poli.

"The seniors have had been tremendous," said Cairra. "Mike Curtis had a great year, Corey (Stillings) did as well behind the plate and Jimmy Davey had a tremendous season. Those guys are going to be tough to replace. Realistically going into this season I thought we could do what we did getting that many wins. They probably left a few wins on the table as well. It was a strong team and it's going to be tough to fill those holes."

"We do have a good nucleus coming back, up the middle and we have three pitchers coming back and first base we'll be fine with Gillis and Jamie Hill and third base Devin Field will move in there, so we got a good solid, five or six guys coming back (with experience). The question will be whether we'll need an entire new outfield if we move Evan Raffi behind the plate, or if we're going to need to find a catcher (and replace two outfielders)."

WHS Track Round-Up

Cowden and Bischoff advance to All-States

By JAMIE POTE
Sports Editor

Jamiepote@hotmail.com
PEMBROKE -- Two Wilmington High School senior members of the Girls Track team placed in the top four of their respective events during Saturday's Division 3 Eastern Mass Track-and-Field meet held in Pembroke to advance to this weekend's All-State Meet to be held at Bridgewater State College.

Kaitlyn Cowden finished second in the discus throwing 109-04, finishing behind Tewksbury's Chelsey Porcaro, who threw 119-02. Also Alex Bischoff finished fourth in the 400-meters at 1:00.32 to also advance at least one more week of competition.

One other Wilmington female scored in an individual event as Julia Gake was sixth in the 800 at 2:23.52, while the 4x400 relay team of Kelly Hartsough, Gake, Christina Spinos and Bischoff finished in eighth place at 4:21.22.

On the Boys' side, two athletes and one relay team scored points for the team as Kyle Souza was the top finisher, as the senior was sixth in the 400 at 53.06. Freshman Joe Gaudreau was eighth at 23.80 and the 4x800 relay team of Alex Pizette, Craig Smith, Kevin Goncalves and Jared Walsh finished seventh with a combined time of 8:46.18.

"We had some disappointing performances, but there were also some highlights," said WHS Boys Track Coach Mike Kinney. "The highlights of the day were Kyle Souza placing sixth in the 400, Joe Gaudreau placing eighth in the 200, and the 4x800 team of Alex Pizette, Kevin Goncalves, Craig Smith, and Jared Walsh placing seventh."

In the other running events, Colin Chase was 13th in the 400-hurdles at 1:01.93, Walsh was 13th in the mile at 4:41.60, Ben Rohleder was 18th in the 110-meter high hurdles at 18.24, Connor Townsend was 26th in the 200 at 25.27, Gaudreau was 28th in the 100 at 12.11, while the 4x400 relay team of Chase, Souza, Ryan Horgan and Townsend were 13th at 3:45.58 and the 4x100 team of Townsend, Evan Sperlinga, Dan Bell and Devin Langenfeld were 15th at 47.18 seconds.

In the field events, Jon Weaver was 10th in the discus at 124-08 and 17th in the shot put at 41-07.25, Steve Layon was 14th in the javelin at 124-03 and Eli Jennings finished 14th in the shot put at 42-08.50, while he fouled out of the discus competition.

"Eli fouled three times in the discus which was disappointing end to his career although he may compete at Nationals," said Kinney. "He will also be competing at UMass Lowell next year. In the shot put, he fouled his first two throws and was very reluctant on his last throw. The last throw was 42-8."

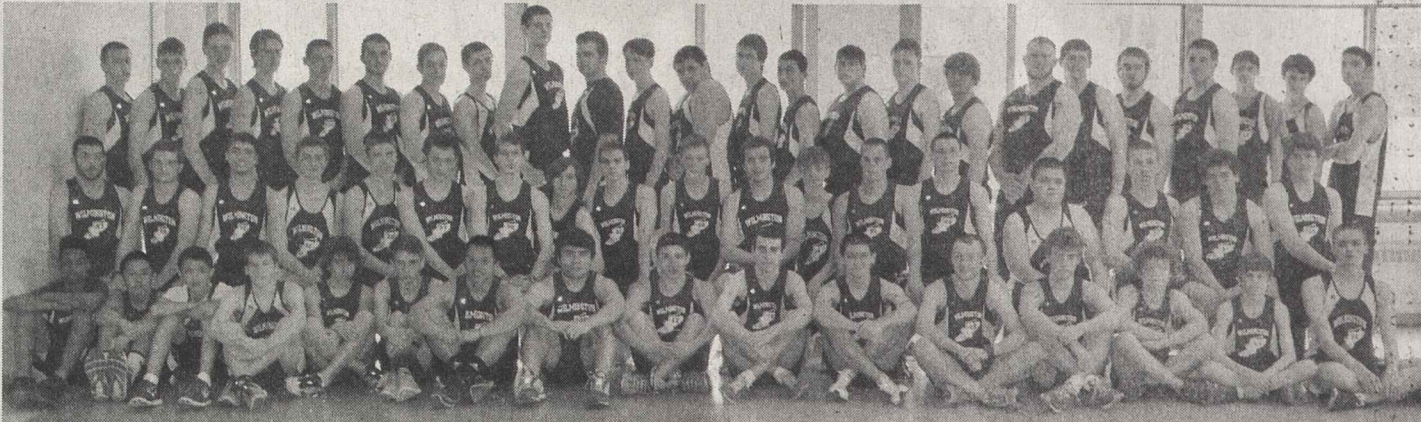

Jennings leaves WHS as one of the all-time best throwers in program history with a long list of achievements. As a sophomore, he finished second in the shot put and third in the discus during the Division 3 Eastern Mass Indoor Championships. He carried that over to his junior indoor season where he was a Middlesex League Champion in the shot put and then finished second at the D3 Meet and then outdoors he finished first at the D3 Meet in the discus and fourth in the shot put.

This past year as a senior, he finished first at the Middlesex League and Division 3 in the shot put, and went on to take fourth at the All-States. Then this past spring, he won the Andover Invitational Meet in the discus, finishing just four inches off the meet record, and he was also a league champion in both the discus and shot put. He was named a League All-Star for the sixth time, while he's been a Lowell Sun All-Star three times, a three-time Team MVP and a four-seasoned captain between indoor and outdoor track. He leaves the program throwing personal bests of 51-3 in the shot put and 162-2 in the discus during the outdoor season.

"I had to verify the school record in the discus because I was basing it largely off of Mr. Kelley's memory," said Kinney. "I found the Lowell Sun articles from May 24th and June 12th of 1977 and I found that Steve Winchell's actual school record was 161'10 not 162'10. Therefore, Eli actually did set the school record at the league meet with 162-2. The record has stood for 37 years."

"Eli has been pleasure to coach him and watch him compete over the last four years. It will be extremely difficult to replace him. He has done so much for the program. I don't think we will see another thrower of his caliber in quite some time at Wilmington High School."

Besides Jennings officially breaking the record he has desired for a long time, the other big news coming out of the Boys program came on Saturday as the team was awarded the MIAA Outdoor Track Sportsmanship Award.

"This was an honor because the team is composed of great young men who look at athletic competitions with the right perspective," said Kinney. "They have carried themselves with dignity and class this year, through victory and defeat. This year's senior athletes and captains have been exceptional role models and it is nice to know that our competitors have recognized them for their sportsmanship. They have shown respect for the coaches, officials, opponents, and themselves."

Burlington High Coach Matt Carr wrote a letter to WHS Athletic Director Ed Harrison on behalf of the Boys program praising their sportsmanship qualities. Here's what he had to say:

"For the second year in a row, the Burlington and Wilmington boys track teams met in an undefeated match-up. The meet was very tight, decided only in the second to last event. Once again, your track team (coaches and athletes alike) showed such class, I have to commend them and you for it."

"I've been on the losing side of tight meets and know that despite the respect I may feel for the opposition, after a loss congratulating them isn't always easy. In my 17 years of coaching, I can count on one hand the number of athletes from opposing teams (other than Wilmington) who have congratulated me for a win. Thursday, I would estimate over a dozen Wilmington athletes came up to me to offer their congratulations, as well as Mike (Kinney) and his assistants.

"I addressed my team, and while congratulating them for winning their third spring track championship in a row, I told them the streak will not last forever (nothing does). I told them that if it is broken during their tenure at BHS, I hope they show the same class toward the team that beats us as Wilmington did this past week."

Turning back to the Girls team, besides the athletes who scored points, a number of other girls also competed. In the running events, Hartsough was 21st in the 800 at 2:34.34, Amber Peach was 25th in the 110 hurdles at 18.19, while the 4x800 relay team of Jordyn Granara, Elisabeth Olson, Nicole Romanzo and Jackie Ryan finished 18th at 11:58.19 and the 4x100 relay team of Kaila Bavin, Siobhan Turner, Devyn Malatesta and Samantha Pitzit finished 23rd at 55.17 seconds.

In the field events, Cowden also finished 12th in the shot put throwing 31-05.75, while Bischoff was 18th in the javelin at 93-04. Olivia O'Regan was 19th in the discus at 82-08 and 25th in the shot put at 27-10.75 and Peach was 23rd in the triple jump at 31-05.75.

Wilmington High sophomore Jackson Gillis tossed a 1-hit shut out in the Wildcats 1-0 win over Arlington at home last Thursday afternoon. (photo by JoeBrownphotos.com)

Gillis continues to completely dominate

By JAMIE POTE

WILMINGTON - It's been 16 years since we've seen such a dominating pitcher, while it's probably been a first since we've seen so many college and pro scouts lining up behind the fences with their radar guns and notebooks charting every pitch he throws.

Last Thursday afternoon, all while battling the flu, Wilmington High sophomore left-hander Jackson Gillis picked up his second straight shut out, his first state tournament win with a one-hit masterpiece in the team's 1-0 thrilling victory over Arlington in a first round Division 2 North State Tournament game played at Scanlon Memorial Field.

Scouts from Wake Forest and Harvard were in attendance watching Gillis touch 88-90 consistently on the radar gun. That came just five days after a scout from Major League Baseball as well as a number of other Division 1 Colleges were on hand to watch him mow down Concord-Carlisle in the first game of the end of the regular season Scanlon tournament.

On Thursday, Gillis was in complete control, giving up an infield single in the sixth, one walk while striking out seven. It was his second straight complete game shut out and he ends the season with a 7-2 record, including an 0.78 ERA and four shut outs (five combined). In 57.1 innings this season, he struck out 102 batters. In his seven wins this season, he gave up two earned runs on 13 hits and struck out 79.

Back in 1998, Scott Swiezynski finished 10-0 for the 'Cats leading the team to the Division 3 Eastern Mass Finals, falling one win away from playing in the state final at Fenway Park. Easily Gillis is the best pitcher since that season.

Scouts have been lining up to see Gillis pitch and if he continues to be this dominating the next two seasons, he could very well follow the likes of former pitchers Rick Froton, Jeff Williamson, Jason Bere and Mike Alonardo with getting a possible taste at the professional level.

"The (scouts) have been here all year so it's nothing that he hasn't seen," said head coach Aldo Caira after the win last Thursday. "Major League Baseball was here on Saturday watching him pitch. He's used to it, so it's a good thing and I think he's maturing as the season has gone on."

For the record, Gillis wouldn't be eligible for the MLB Draft until he graduates from WHS in two years.

The 6-foot-3, 220-pound southpaw retired the first five batters to face him on Thursday before giving up a two out walk in the bottom of the second. The next batter reached on an infield error, before Gillis got out of the jam getting the next batter Dan Shaw on a groundout. Gillis then retired the next nine batters keeping the game scoreless through five innings.

"I was pretty excited (early on)," he said. "It can be hard to control your emotions. I felt real good going into the game (although) I've been sick the last few days and I started to feel better today. I think the situation (of pitching in a tournament game) just got me a little too excited but once I settled in and attacked batters, I felt like I was pitching well."

Gillis was asked if he was getting a bit uneasy with the game scoreless through five innings.

"Yeah, I was (getting anxious)," he said. "I was. I was worried that we wouldn't be able to score any runs but then thankfully (Jimmy) Davey came through. He's been great all season."

Arlington's lead-off hitter in the top of the sixth, No. 9 hitter Sam Slebodneck, hit a ball near the second base bag. Brian Cavanaugh went a few steps to his right and the ball bounced off his glove, however Slebodneck was well up the line and it seemed very

Rams beat AC, but then fall to Hornets

By MIKE IPPOLITO
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
BILERICA - When the pairings for the state tournament were announced last Tuesday, it looked like the Shawsheen Tech Baseball team had drawn the proverbial short straw in their matchup with Arlington Catholic, having already lost to the Catholic Central League power twice during the season, by scores of 9-3 and 11-4.

Fortunately for fans of Shawsheen Baseball, that short straw viewpoint was not shared by members of the Rams nine, who instead viewed another matchup with the Cougars as nothing more than a great opportunity. And did they ever take advantage of the opportunity, earning a 7-3 win last Friday in the first round of the Division 3 North Tournament to earn a spot in the quarterfinals against North Reading where they were eliminated on Tuesday.

It was the first tournament win for the Shawsheen Baseball team since 2008 and Rams coach Brian McCarthy was proud of the way his team bounced back after their two earlier defeats to AC.

"Our kids are resilient. They are tough physically and mentally. They were ready to go from the moment the seedings were announced," McCarthy said. "We knew it was going to be a tough game, but if we limited our mistakes and capitalized on theirs we could be competitive at the very least."

"I'm very proud of this team, a win like this just shows how strong our will to win really is."

No. 7 Shawsheen (14-7) was led by a spectacular performance both on the mound and at the plate by senior Matt Lucia of Tewksbury. Lucia tossed a complete game, scattering eight hits while striking out six and allowing just two earned runs, while also proving the biggest hit of the game, a tie breaking grand slam in the bottom of the fifth inning to give the Rams their 7-3 margin of victory.

Shawsheen fell behind 2-0 in this one, as No. 10 AC (13-8) scored single runs in both the first and third innings, but once again the Rams were not intimidated by their early deficit.

"The kids didn't panic. They knew we could hang with them," McCarthy said. "We were hitting the ball early in the game, we just had nothing to show for it yet. But the kids knew we could be competitive. And with Matt Lucia on the mound, our team has a sense of confidence that we are in any game to the very end."

Shawsheen got right back in the game, and in fact took the lead in the bottom of the third. With one out sophomore Brendan O'Flaherty of Wilmington walked and advanced to second on single by sophomore Andy Diranian before coming around to score on an RBI double by Tim Lavoie. One batter later Lavoie and Diranian came around to score on a clutch single to left by senior James Gibb of Wilmington for a 3-2 lead after three.

"That middle of the order continues to come up big for us, as they have all year long," McCarthy said. "James Gibb did a great piece of hitting in a pressure-packed situation."

AC would tie the game in the top of the fifth, but in the bottom of the inning the Rams responded in a big way. With one out Diranian walked, Lavoie singled and Gibb was hit by a pitch, setting the stage for Lucia, who on the next pitch ripped a towering shot over the centerfield fence for a grand slam and a 7-3 lead.

McCarthy insisted that he would have been happy to see any of his clutch performers at the plate in that situation, but he was not complaining when Lucia and his .545 season average strode to the plate.

"We've really bought into the team concept this year at Shawsheen Baseball and that concept is always 'next man up' so to be honest, there are a number of guys that have been hitting well for us this year that we would have been glad to have up at the plate," McCarthy said. "But certainly, Having your leading hitter and league MVP up with the bases loaded in a tournament game is a coach's dream."

Lucia responded in the top of the sixth as well, shutting down AC and thwarting any comeback attempt in both the sixth and the seventh.

"That following half inning is always the most important," McCarthy said. "To have a big inning, then shut them down to take the wind completely out of their sail is what good baseball teams do. Matt was great on the mound that day, but he had tremendous help in the field. We've played some real solid defense down the home stretch and into the tournament this year."

The win for Shawsheen was a huge one, not just because it advanced them into the next round of the tournament, but also for what it meant for the program to win a tournament game for the first time since 2008.

"A win like this is just what we needed for our team," McCarthy said. "We've had a good season, but the tournament starts everybody off with a clean slate. We needed this win to give our team and our program the boost we need."

Vs North Reading

Unfortunately for the Rams, things did not go as well in their next game, as they suffered a 4-0 loss to No. 2 North Reading in the quarterfinals.

The Rams got an outstanding pitching performance from sophomore Dan McCrevan of Tewksbury, who allowed only to hits and one earned run over six innings of work, but they were unable to generate any offense of their own, being limited to four hits in the game.

While the loss was certainly a tough way to end the season for McCarthy and the Rams, it could not diminish what was an outstanding season overall for the team.

"The hurt of the loss hits for a while, but as coaches we get to see a bigger picture than the kids do," McCarthy said. "We had a good season that we are proud of. We had a young and inexperienced team and we accomplished our goal of a league title and a tournament berth and picked up our first tournament win since 2008. We have a lot to be proud of."

One of the things that McCarthy is most proud of this season was the play and leadership of his seniors, Lucia, Gibb, Shawn Costa, Lars Hanson, Tom Welch and Ryan Cormier.

"There are some guys in that group that put up some huge numbers, but the biggest thing was that they really bought into the team philosophy from the get go," McCarthy said. "We are going to miss that, but you hope that some of the young kids saw what the seniors did and pick up on that going into next season."

While losing the seniors will hurt, the Rams will bring back a talented group of those young players into next season including McCrevan, Diranian, O'Flaherty, Tim Lavoie, Anthony Bova and Dan Daniliuk among others.

"It certainly is a different situation than in the past when we have lost a lot of kids to graduation," McCarthy said. "This will be a nice off season for us seeing these kids work hard and get ready for next season."

Softball and lacrosse teams fall in first round

By MIKE IPPOLITO
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com

It was an unusual season in many ways for the Shawsheen Tech Softball team, as they went through many growing pains en route to a 9-9 regular season, failing to win the CAC championship for the first time in seven years with several new players getting their first taste of varsity action.

The growing pains really should have come as no surprise for the Lady Rams, who lost five starters off of last year's championship squad, including four who had been with the team for four consecutive titles during their careers.

Despite the heavy losses this group of Lady Rams was resilient all season long, overcoming some shaky performances to finish .500 and earn a spot in the post season where they took on Greater Lowell on Saturday in Tyngsboro in the preliminary round of the MIAA Division 3 North Tournament.

Unfortunately for No. 17 seed Shawsheen they saw their season come to an end on Saturday, coming up just short against the No. 16 Gryphons, falling by a score of 3-2 to finish their season at 9-10 overall.

Shawsheen did not go down without a fight in their final game, putting the tying and potential lead runners on in both the sixth and seventh innings, but were unable to plate them through a combination of missed opportunities and bad luck.

"We had people on base in every inning except the first, but we did not get the big hit when we needed it," Shawsheen coach Maureen Buckley said.

The first missed opportunity for the Lady Rams came with them trailing 3-2 in the top of the sixth with senior Danielle Cacciola (2-for-2, two runs scored) on first base and junior Jamie Ray of Tewksbury at the plate. Ray, who had already tripled twice in the game to score Cacciola ripped another shot to the outfield for another triple, sending Cacciola around the bases once again, but this time she was thrown out at the plate on a perfect relay by Greater Lowell.

"I got Danielle thrown out at the plate," Buckley said. "Jamie was just crushing the ball, but Greater Lowell got a perfect relay from the outfield, to the cut-off to the plate and they got her or we would have tied the game right there."

The final chance for Shawsheen came in the top of the seventh, when senior Kennedy Harper of Wilmington stepped to the plate with two outs and runners and first and second.

Harper had already done something remarkable just by returning to the lineup after missing the previous week after sustaining broken and fractured bones in her face during a game, the result of a fly ball that hit her in the face, and she came within inches of making it a truly memorable day when she drilled a shot ticketed for right field.

Unfortunately for Harper and the Lady Rams, she had the misfortune of simply hitting the ball too hard, as it hit the runner going from first to second for the third out of the inning and the end of the game.

"Kennedy just drilled it, but it hit the runner and that was it," Buckley said. "Sometimes you just get some bad luck."

While most of the Lady Rams lineup besides Ray and Cacciola were held pretty much in check by Greater Lowell pitcher Meghan Sullivan, the Gryphons were similarly stymied by Shawsheen junior hurler Kerri Hegarty of Tewksbury, who scattered seven hits while striking out four and walking just one and allowing two earned runs.

"Kerri did a great job on the mound for us," Buckley said. "Greater Lowell got some people on base in scoring position, but she would bear down and get them to pop up or strike out. When she has her good control like she did in that game she is very difficult to hit."

The good news for Buckley and the Lady Rams is that Hegarty will be one of the team's key returnees next season, along with Ray, Katie Welch (Tewksbury), Mariah Wentzell (Tewksbury), Katie Stevens (Wilmington), Lauren Barletta and Mikayla Porcaro (Tewksbury) among others.

While Shawsheen will lose the services of seniors Harper, Cacciola and Emily Knoops of Tewksbury, Buckley is confident that the experience gained by her young team this season will be very beneficial heading into next season.

Boys Lacrosse

The Shawsheen Boys Lacrosse team saw their season come to an end last Wednesday with a 15-3 loss to Malden Catholic in the first round of the MIAA Division 2 North Tournament.

The No. 9 seed Shawsheen Rams finished their season with an overall record of 10-11, while No. 3 Malden Catholic moved on to the quarterfinals where they were defeated by No. 1 Melrose.

Shawsheen got a pair of goals and an assist from sophomore midfielder Josh Bouley, as well as a goal from fellow sophomore midfielder Zach DeLuca, while seniors Jim Derochers and Joe Bumbaca played well defensively for the Rams and junior goalie Kevin Vacca made 15 saves in the defeat.

The Rams 10-11 overall record this season included an 8-3 mark in the CAC, good for second place in the league. The Rams were led in scoring by sophomore attack Jack Stone, who had 32 goals and 17 assists for 49 points, while junior Tom Avtgis had 31 points and 12 assists for 43 points and sophomore Zach DeLuca chipped in with 18 goals and 23 assists for 41 points.

Other top scorers for the Rams included junior Jack Peacock (17g, 7a, 24 points), junior John Reynolds (7-7-14) and freshman Jake Nardone (9-5-14), while they got outstanding defensive play all season long from Bumbaca, Derochers, junior Jon Tower, sophomore Andrew Duarte, freshman Anthony DiPrimeo and sophomore Kyle Tremblay among others.

Vacca also had an outstanding season in net for the Rams with a .683 save percentage, stopping 303 of 441 shots on goal.

Gillis continues to dominate

unlikely that Cavanaugh would have thrown him out had it fielded the ball cleanly. This writer, as well as head coach Aldo Caira ruled it a base hit, although Gillis and his teammates disagreed and thought he tossed his second no-hitter of the season.

But that was all Arlington would get off of Gillis. Slebodneck advanced to second on a wild pitch before getting thrown out at third as Emmitt Rojo hit a ball that went off the glove of Gillis, where Cavanaugh fielded it and threw out Slebodneck trying to reach third. Gillis then retired the next five batters to close out the game, all the while watching Jimmy Davey single in Ryan Carroccino with two outs in the bottom of the sixth for the lone run of the game.

"This is great," said Gillis. "We are rolling (with five wins in a row) and we have a lot of momentum going into the next game so hopefully we can keep rolling. I think our energy and our focus has gone up. When we were in our slump, we were a bit overconfident and expected to win and now we have gone after it. I think we're just a lot more focused."

That win made it four straight for Gillis on the mound, who ended the season giving up two earned runs over his last 28 innings, and giving up only nine hits while walking 10 and striking out 46.

"Jackson was probably 80 percent today, between going (last Saturday), being a bit tired and he has been sick the last few days. But eighty percent of Jack is better than most pitchers," said Caira. "He kept the ball around the plate all game and walked just one batter and that's important because when he gets tired he walks people and he didn't today. He got stronger as the game progressed and that was the good part as we were worried about that because he hasn't been feeling well."

"He wasn't at one hundred percent and for him to do that is just mindboggling. He just doesn't get rattled (out there) and just goes about his business and locates the ball."

Letter to the Sports Editor

Hendee, Priem say thank you

Dear Jamie,
On Sunday, May 18th, approximately 125 children from Wilmington and surrounding towns participated in the 9th annual PanMass Challenge Wilmington-Andover Kids Bike Ride. Kids from preschool through sixth grade raised over $14,500 which will go directly to the Jimmy Fund and Dana Farber Cancer Institute in Boston. Over the course of nine years, the PMC Wilmington-Andover Ride has raised over $130,000 to fight cancer.

There are many people who volunteered their time and services for this event, and we would like to thank the following people for their support:

Officer Brian Moon and the Wilmington Police Department; Superintendent of Schools Joanne Benton; Wilmington Board of Selectmen; Dave Elliott; Carl and Zack Toto; Wilmington Elementary and Middle School Teachers and Staff; Wilmington H.S. students; Andover H.S. Varsity Field Hockey Team and Coaches; The Pettengill Family Greg Potcner and Wilmington Trophies; Wilmington Kiwanis Club; Wilmington Cub Scout Pack 136 and all of the others who volunteered on the day of the ride. We are proud to be a part of such an incredibly generous community, and sincerely thank all who participated, cheered on the riders, donated money, and otherwise supported this wonderful event.

Sincerely,
Sue Hendee and Carolyn Priem, Coordinators of the Wilmington-Andover Pan-Mass Challenge Kids Ride.

Under 11 White team wins

The Wilmington U11 White Boys Lacrosse team closed out the regular season against Wakefield with its best offensive output of the year on a beautiful day at the Woburn Street School on Sunday, June 1.

Down 2-0 early, the Wildcats battled hard to keep the game tight. Brian Curdo led the scoring with a pair of goals and an assist. The midfield line of John Rhind, Ryan Dusablon, and Curdo combined for four of Wilmington's six goals in the game.

Attackman Owen White scored late in the second quarter, while attackman Cam Eich was a constant offensive threat and led the team in shots.

At the other end of the field, Jake Warford was solid in the first half in goal, while the defense led by Ryan Murray, Joey Kullman, Alex Booska, and Aydan Churchill held Wakefield's powerful offense in check.

Goalie Kevin Stevens was outstanding in the second half, making a half dozen points blank saves to keep the Wildcats in the game.

The Wildcats also got outstanding contributions at both ends of the field from Ashton Stalker, Jake Perry, and Hugh Murphy, while attackmen Jimmy Ward and Connor Wood also saw plenty of offensive opportunities.

Cheating death, again!

Winchester's Fiore runs death race for Woburn charity

BY RYAN LAROCHE

Last year, Winchester firefighter Joshua Fiore competed in the Spartan Death Race. This year, he's back again. Suffice it to say that he did not die the first time (thankfully). His running in the race a second time doesn't mean he has a death wish. It's actually the exact opposite, as he wants to use the race to raise money for Courage 2 Cure, a Woburn charity established to raise funds to support cancer research for children.

After competing (perhaps surviving is a better word since he called the race "pure hell") last year, Fiore had doubts about running again. It took him 75 hours to finish the race. While that may seem like a long time, and it no doubt feels even longer if you're in the race, considering only 10 percent of those who show up actually finish, completing the race in 75 hours is really an amazing accomplishment. In fact, not dying might be considered an amazing accomplishment, as well.

Fiore, both a Winchester firefighter and paramedic, chose to step up to the plate again with encouragement from the race director.

"He really liked me," Fiore said. "He said, 'It would be great to have you back.'"

Considering Fiore was one of only 25-30 people who finished the race, it would make sense that the director would want him back. He clearly showed heart and determination last year, two qualities that seem like a must to finish (or survive) a death race.

Last year, Fiore ran in support of the Mass. Aggression Research Center in Bridgewater that helps train teachers and principals all over the state to deal with bullying in school. This year, he once again steps up for children, this time for those dealing with cancer.

The organization, Courage 2 Cure, was founded in memory of Logan Foster who died at four-years old and KerriAnne Lugelle who died at nine-years old. Both died from childhood cancer. The organization is run by Cobey Foster, Logan's mother, Theresa Equatore, Logan's grandmother, and Stacey Gugliuzza.

The website courage2cure.org states that Logan, who died from a very rare and aggressive form of cancer known as medulloblastoma, was "a tough little boy" who "fought every day for his life."

Fiore knows all too well about little boys, as he has a son who cheered him on during last year's race and will be cheering again when Fiore runs on Friday, June 27. In fact, Fiore says his son kept him going last year.

"I definitely thought about quitting," Fiore admitted, "but seeing my son holding a sign that said, 'Come on, dad, you can do it' gave me the strength to keep going."

The Winchester firefighter said that the race makes a mess of you mentally, physically and emotionally. He said the mental aspect is the toughest. You're going to hurt, he admitted, but mentally you have to stay awake all the while wondering why you signed up for this.

Fiore managed 15 minutes of sleep, which he called napping, during the race. Some of the crazy tasks Fiore had to complete were swimming mile long laps, carrying 60 lbs of required gear, and carrying another 45 lbs up a mountain.

And just to make things that much more difficult, it rained.

So, the race is tough, the conditions can be tough, it kills you mentally, physically and emotionally, and you'll probably think about quitting every step you take through the course. Who wouldn't sign up for this? Apparently, 400 people signed up last year, though only 250 actually competed (150 people must have come to their senses).

On paper, this seems like something crazy only a man would try. But, no, women are crazy, too, apparently. Fiore said at least two women finished the course: his friend, Camille, and another woman with a prosthetic leg.

"She was a beast the entire time," Fiore said about the woman with the prosthetic leg. "It was extraordinary."

Although he survived, Fiore's friends in the fire department still think he's crazy. However, he said he managed to convince some of them to compete in smaller races (5K).

Last year, Fiore's goal was to just finish. He did. This year, his goals haven't changed. He'll be competing to S-4

Movie Reviews

"Maleficent"

by Paul Feely

"MALEFICENT" STARS ANGELINA JOLIE. It is the rework of the story of Sleeping Beauty. The movie provides a release from reality with beauty, wit and energy. Children of all ages will be amazed.

"MALEFICENT"
GRADE: *****

With powerful visuals, imagination to spare and a great performance by Angelina Jolie, "Maleficent" reworks the story of Sleeping Beauty with grace and humor.

Of course there's the worry if today's kids even know who Sleeping Beauty is. Truth be told, though, it shouldn't matter.

"Maleficent" builds its own magical world while following a narrative that feels more modern. Major credit has to be given to first-time director Robert Stromberg, but it's hard to imagine anyone bringing more to the title role than Jolie, who mixes majesty with humor and a stunning look. She's having a delicious time, and serving up a reminder that female action heroes are free to kick butt these days.

Maleficent is a powerful young fairy living in an enchanted land that borders a human kingdom. And in terms of enchantment, we're talking "Avatar" levels of invention and sparkle here (the 3-D is superb). One day she meets a human boy, Stefan (Sharlto Copley), and as they grow up together, they fall in love.

But then the human king decides to invade the enchanted land. Bad idea. Maleficent and a host of tree-warriors send the humans running. The dying king offers his crown to anyone who can exact revenge. So the ambitious Stefan meets up with his childhood friend, drugs her, and cuts off her wings.

Disfigured and darkened inside, Maleficent becomes a hardened ruler of the land, transforming a crow into a changeling named Diaval (Sam Riley), who becomes her spy and servant.

When she hears that Stefan, who is now king, has had a child with his queen, she shows up for the christening and puts a curse on the young girl: On the day she turns 16 she will prick her finger on a spinning wheel and fall into a coma. The only thing that can wake her is a kiss from a true love. The catch is, Maleficent doesn't believe in true love.

Stefan declares the baby should be taken to a secret place and held there until the day after her 16th birthday. She's to be cared for by a trio of ditty-sweet fairies (Imelda Staunton, Lesley Manville and Juno Temple) who resemble the Three Stooges.

But Maleficent finds out where the girl (eventually Elle Fanning) is taken. And she observes from afar. Eventually, despite consistently caustic remarks, she finds herself drawn to the child she has cursed.

The great weapon screenwriter Woolverton wields here is humor, and Jolie's deadpan delivery is extremely effective. No matter how hardened Maleficent may appear, the wisecracks let us know there's still someone inside.

As usual, humans don't come off too well in this tale. Better to hang out with the happy trolls and flying sprites of a magical world than to deal with greedy homo sapiens. Such is the escape of fairy tales, though, and "Maleficent" provides that release from reality with beauty, wit and energy. Children of all ages will be amazed.

"GODZILLA"
GRADE: *****

The good news is Godzilla is back, in all his spine-rattling glory.

Godzilla has remained a fascination among sci-fi lovers for more than 60 years, and because of his status as perhaps the longest-tenured (and tallest) popular figure in the genre, fans want to see their star get his props on the big screen.

The last time Hollywood tried doing a Godzilla film was Roland Emmerich's 1998 version, a colossal dud that had many people questioning whether Emmerich had ever seen a Godzilla film.

Fortunately, director Gareth Edwards and writers Max Borenstein and Dave Callaham fare much, much better in the new "Godzilla." They've managed to update the story while leaving enough of the legend intact to satisfy longtime fans.

Instead of being a product of the atomic age as in the original story, this time Big G was apparently a target of the atomic age (or were you wondering why we blew up so many nukes in the Pacific back in the 1950s?)

Bryan Cranston plays a scientist on a quest to expose what caused a nuclear meltdown (a big animal) at an Indian power plant in the '90s that killed his wife (Juliette Binoche, in a role requiring about three minutes of screen time). His ensuing quest alienates him from his son (Aaron Taylor-Johnson), a Navy bomb expert who lives in San Francisco with his wife (Elizabeth Olsen) and young son.

But the humans are the least of Godzilla's concerns. There are a couple of giant slimy things on his radar - radiation-gobbling MUTOS (Massive Unidentified Terrestrial Organisms), one of which emerges from the Pacific and starts wreaking havoc in Japan.

Meanwhile, another MUTO - which was apparently dumped years earlier in a cave near Las Vegas with other nuclear waste - emerges and starts moving west.

Meanwhile, we see bits and pieces of Godzilla, roused and for some reason racing across the Pacific to do battle with the MUTOS, who have reunited in San Francisco and are trying to raise a family, despite the pesky military's insistence on shooting at them.

As the film engages in suspense-building, we don't actually see the big guy until about halfway through the film. Good move. It makes him look even more menacing when he does appear. When he finally decides to show off his new and improved fire breath, I nearly jumped out of my chair with a fist-pump.

While the monsters are computer-generated, the destroyed landscapes come via old school model-making. The combination makes for fantastic visuals, especially in 3D.

Lost in all the action is the question of whether Godzilla is a good guy and, if so, why. And what's his motive? But, really, who cares? As the Japanese scientist played by Ken Watanabe says, we shouldn't mess with nature. Just let the big brutes fight it out.

If you're looking for a summer blockbuster that delivers pure escapism for 2 hours without overstaying its welcome, Godzilla won't disappoint you.

About the Towns

by Phyllis Nissen

TEE TIMES, TARGET REACHED, IN CHAMBERS

Please check your local "Daily Times Chronicle" for daily updates.

'MODEST' IN WINCHESTER

"Winchester Country Club has filed for a special permit to construct a new Golf Learning Center on its grounds," notes the Winchester edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"Intended to 'enhance the recreational golf experience and facilities available for its members,' the project consists of a golf learning facility and practice range plus a six-hole Par 3 'Wee Course'."

"The club intends siting the new features on a 27-acre tract of existing undeveloped club land, directly altering 13.6 acres to construct the facility. The remainder of tract is to be preserved as open space and treed buffer from surrounding properties and streets..."

"The indoor teaching facility is to be 'a modest two-story building' of approximately 3,600 square feet (including basement, first floor, and porch) in an architectural style which is reportedly to be consistent with the existing club building...The application says that 'dense residential uses were strongly considered for the property given the present value of 27 acres of upland in the Town of Winchester that is eminently buildable."

"However, the club membership voted to support a use consistent with the club's mission and purpose, one which the application states respects the local neighborhood character and setting of the property as open space and outdoor recreational use."

"The proposed plan meets the objective of this compatible land use for the property and its club members. It is a seasonal, low intensive use not open to the public and will serve to improve the nature and character of this existing open space and its surrounding neighborhoods."

"A public hearing is in progress with the Conservation Commission. A separate hearing with the Zoning Board of Appeals is scheduled to begin on June 17..."

-Not quite the rest of the story in Wilmington- The Yentile Farm Committee reports the following:

"The Yentile Farm Development Committee has prepared a detailed concept plan for the former Yentile farm property. The town already owns the land, without raising taxes to purchase it, and currently the committee is working on the elements for this new park, which carries an estimated cost of $3-$6 million.

"We've been unable to get the survey software to behave, so we'll do it manually."

"Yes! A new park is long overdue: Yes@YourTownCrier.com

"A new park would be "nice-to-have" but not critical: Maybe@YourTownCrier.com

"No! Wilmington has more important things to do: No@YourTownCrier.com "

Once again: stay tuned.

BUT RIGHT ON TARGET IN WILMINGTON

"Carole Hamilton, Director of Wilmington Planning and Conservation, met with Wilmington Chamber of Commerce members ... to update local business leaders about projects on the horizon," notes the Wilmington "Town Crier."

"Hamilton gave a general oversight talk on the functions and duties of the commission and hit on popular topics such as the new Target store being built at 206 Ballardvale Street on the Wilmington - Andover line. The facility offers 186,000 square foot retail space with an additional 14,000 square foot retail service space primarily for fast food and, of course, another 'Dunkin Donuts'."

"Target is scheduled for completion in the fall of this year..."

WAKEFIELD IN WAKEFIELD

"The Board of Directors of the Wakefield Area Chamber of Commerce has appointed Marianne Cohen to the position of Executive Director," notes the Wakefield edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"Cohen, a resident of Wakefield, was selected following a comprehensive search conducted by members of the Board of Directors.

"In announcing the appointment on behalf of the Board of Directors, Co-Presidents Suzanne Bowering and Cheryl Carroll cited Cohen's experience in marketing, consulting, product development, relationship building, as well as sales, management and event planning. She has served as Vice President - Marketing and Product Development and Senior Consultant with Mannersmith Etiquette Consulting of Marblehead, and as Event Planner, Director of Corporate Membership and Marketing, and Director, Visitor Services and Promotions for the USS Constitution Museum in Charlestown.

"Cohen has also been associated with Conference Development, Inc., LifeCycle Learning Resources, Inc., and Bank of New England..."

"I am pleased to join the Wakefield Area Chamber of Commerce," Marianne said. "As a 16-year resident of Wakefield, I look forward to this opportunity which will enable me to draw upon my familiarity with Wakefield and the surrounding communities for the betterment of local business."

"About the Towns" covers recent events in the 10-town Middlesex East area. Because Middlesex East deadlines are early, please check the front sections of this paper or look on line for up-to-date information about your city or town.

We also welcome original material - please send it to Phyllis Nissen, "About the Towns," Middlesex East Supplement, 531 Main St, Reading, MA 01867 or to schooltowns@comcast.net.

•MIDDLESEX EAST SPORTS WEEKLY TRIVIA:

Who is the former NFL running back that competed at the 1992 Winter Olympics in the two-man Bobsled competition, finishing seventh?

Answer appears elsewhere in this column.

•BRYANA HARRON, a sophomore center of The Womens Ice Hockey Team at Franklin Pierce University was awarded "The Coaches" award for her valuable contribution to the team on and off the ice. She scored the first game winning goal and scored the first penalty shot in the history of the program. The 2013-2014 program ended with an impressive 18-4-2 record. BRYANA IS A FORMER MEMBER OF THE WOBURN MEMORIAL HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS HOCKEY TEAM and a Herald All Scholastic with over 100 points.

•Seven members of the UMass Lowell Baseball team were honored Wednesday night at the America East barbeque held at LeLachur Park in Lowell, Mass.

"The individual awards to our players are a direct result of our team accomplishments," said Head Coach Ken Harring. "I am very proud of the efforts of the entire team and coaching staff."

Junior Matthew Sanchez (Sunrise, Fla.) and freshman Ian Strom (Hopedale, Mass.) both were selected to the First-Team. Senior Mike Calzetta (Lawrence, Mass.) and junior Danny Mendick (Rochester, N.Y.) each were selected to the Second-Team.

The River Hawks placed three players on the America East Baseball All-Academic Team, tied for most of any program. SENIOR NICK BOUTURES (WILMINGTON, MASS.), junior Jacob O'Keefe (Wellington, Fla.) and sophomore Matt Mottola (Newburyport, Mass.) were the UMass Lowell representative.

A History major, Boutours graduated with a 3.65 GPA. The relief pitcher made 14 appearances and went 2-1 with a 1.72 ERA.

The River Hawks finished the year with a 20-22 record. UMass Lowell placed third in the America East Conference with a 10-10 record.

•Need some help with the trivia question? His initials are H.W.

•NEWBURY COLLEGE SOPHOMORE SHERI LIGGIERO became the first Newbury College Softball player to be named to the National Fastpitch Coaches Association (NFCA) Division 3 All-Region Softball Team.

LIGGIERO, A 2012 GRADUATE OF TEWKSBURY HIGH was also named to the All-NECC

First Team for the second consecutive season, hitting .394 from her leadoff position for the Night Hawks with a .459 on base percentage, while breaking the Newbury College record for steals in a season with 19.

•FITCHBURG STATE UNIVERSITY FRESHMAN BRIAN AMARAL earned a tenth place finish in a field of 20 runners at the All New England Championships at Westfield State University. The 2013 TEWKSBURY HIGH graduate finished just out of scoring as one of the top eight finishers, coming in with a time of 32:14.32

•UMASS LOWELL FRESHMAN JOHN FIORELLO finished just four inches out of a top eight finish in the shot put at the All New England Championships, finishing with a top throw off 49-10.00 feet to secure ninth place in a field of 23 competitors.

THE 2013 GRADUATE OF TEWKSBURY HIGH also competed in the javelin throw where he finished with a distance of 150-06 feet.

Fiorello's teammate and FELLOW TEWKSBURY HIGH GRADUATE (CLASS OF 2011), RICHARD KIRBY earned a fifth place finish in the 400 meter hurdles at the All New England Championships, finishing in a time of 53.65 seconds.

•DEAN COLLEGE FRESHMAN ARIANNA MEDEIROS helped lead a remarkable turnaround for the Lady Bulldogs Softball team this season. The 2013 GRADUATE OF SHAWSHEEN TECH led the team with a .473 batting average from her leadoff position, while also playing stellar defense at shortstop with a .935 fielding percentage at shortstop as Dean went from a 1-19 season a year ago to an 18-7-1 mark this season including advancing to the finals of the Region XXI Conference Tournament.

Medeiros also led the Lady Bulldogs with 32 runs scored and 12 stolen bases on her way to being named to the All-Region Team for Junior College Region XXI.

•ANSWER TO THIS WEEK'S TRIVIA QUESTION: Herschel Walker.

Fiore

changed. Because the race changes every year, he might not be able to finish in a better time. Therefore, it seems the smart thing is to just try and finish and not worry about how long it takes. He'll once again have a support system in place to push him to reach the finish line.

If he does finish, Fiore will celebrate, not by going on a much deserved vacation, but by gearing up to do it all over again in September. Crazy enough, Fiore signed up to compete in a Team Death Race, which is basically the same as the one he'll be trying in June. In September, however, he'll have three teammates to help him, two of whom will be women: one from South Carolina and one from western Massachusetts. He was asked by the woman from South Carolina and he just couldn't say no.

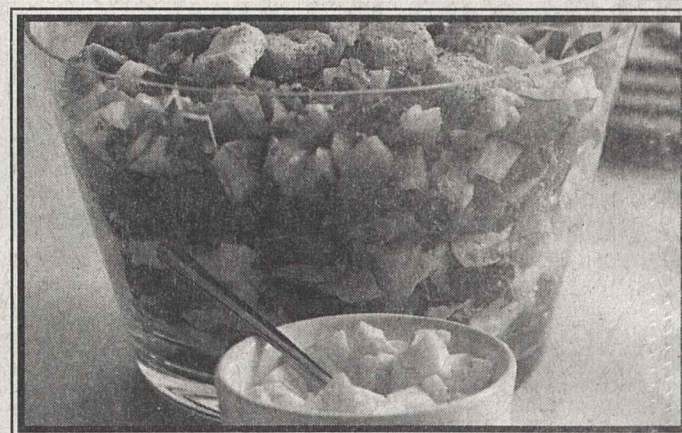

For those who can't make it to Pittsfield, VT, the site of the race, you can help by going to courage2cure.org and donating. For every $100 Fiore said he'll do 100 pushups. If he reaches $1,000, he said he would do 100 burpees (for those unaware, a burpee is an exercise where you drop into squat position with your hands on the ground, kick your legs behind you with your hands extended, return to squat position, and then jump up).

Fiore didn't just survive last year, he used his skills as a paramedic to help others. If he heard someone yelling for help, Fiore would run over to check on them. Fortunately, Fiore didn't suffer any serious injuries of his own. He said he only had swollen feet and blisters.

Hopefully, he'll survive again this year.

Weekly Feature HomeNewsHere RECIPE

Layered Gazpacho Salad

Betty Crocker's Diabetes Cookbook shares a recipe! Salad greens transform a refreshing soup into fork food. What a great idea!

Directions

1. In tightly covered container, shake all vinaigrette ingredients until well blended.
2. In large glass bowl, layer lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers, bell pepper and onion. Pour vinaigrette over top. Cover and refrigerate 1 to 2 hours to blend flavors. Sprinkle eggs and croutons over salad. Toss before serving.

EXPERT TIPS

Traditional gazpacho is an uncooked tomato-based cold vegetable soup originating in southern Spain. It features a pureed or finely chopped combination of bell peppers, cucumbers, onions, celery, garlic, vinegar, oil and sometimes lemon juice. Tomatoes, green bell peppers and cucumbers give you a hefty dose of vitamins A and C in this tasty salad combination.

How to get a better night's sleep

When it is 3 a.m. and you are pacing the halls of your dark and quiet house while everyone else is sleeping soundly in their beds, it may seem like you are the only person in the entire world who is not getting some much-needed shut-eye. However, many people struggle to get a good night's sleep.

Information from the National Sleep Foundation, Better Sleep Council, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and several other organizations indicate that between 20 and 40 percent of the U.S. population experiences insomnia. Many of the people suffering from insomnia have family histories of the condition or are also experiencing depression. Insomnia rates are higher for people over the age of 60, and women are twice as likely to suffer from insomnia than men.

Among Canadians, 40 percent of a recently polled group of 2,000 individuals reported insomnia symptoms at least three times per week in the preceding month. French-speaking Canadians were less likely to experience insomnia than English-speaking residents, but researchers are unsure why.

Although how much sleep a person requires varies from individual to individual, the general consensus is that adults should receive between seven and eight hours of sleep per night to feel rested.

The Institute of Medicine estimates that hundreds of billions of dollars are spent annually on medical costs that are directly related to sleep disorders, while statistics from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration indicate that 100,000 vehicle accidents occur annually as a result of drowsy drivers. These figures underscore the importance of getting a good night's rest and understanding how to treat insomnia in order to do so.

* Insomnia may be a byproduct of a physical condition. A person dealing with side effects of certain medications, chronic pain, restless legs syndrome, sleep apnea, and a bevy of other conditions may find it difficult to sleep at night. Identifying the cause of the insomnia can make it easier to treat, so those who can't sleep at night may have an undiagnosed condition that is affecting their ability to fall asleep.

* Exercise can help promote better sleep habits. A workout will tire you out, increase feel-good endorphins throughout the body and raise body temperature. As the body recovers from the workout, it may feel satiated and you can drift off to sleep more easily. Just do not work out too late. Aim to complete a workout two to three hours before planning on going to sleep so your body is not still amped up when your head hits the pillow.

* Establish a regular sleep schedule. Humans are creatures of routine, and training the body to recognize when it is time to wake up and when it's time to go to sleep can make it easier to enjoy a good night's rest. Stick to a consistent schedule as much as possible - even on the weekends. It isn't possible to make up for lost sleep, so pull yourself out of bed at the same time in the morning, even if you didn't get a good night's rest. Over time you will condition yourself to accept certain times for sleeping and waking.

* The National Sleep Foundation advises avoiding heavy meals, caffeine and nicotine before bed. Each of these things can rev up the body and make it difficult to settle down.

* On the surface, a cocktail may seem like a good way to unwind and relax. Although a drink or two may help many people fall asleep, it will not produce the deep sleep necessary to recharge the body. When the effects of the alcohol wear off after a few hours, your sleep is likely to be interrupted. In addition, relying on alcohol as a sleep remedy can lead to dependence and further health problems.

* Get up and accept a poor night's sleep rather than tossing and turning. It can be easy to associate the bed with wakefulness and frustration if you stay in bed and watch the clock. Getting up and reading or listening to relaxing music can help distract the mind and relax the body. Avoid working on the computer or watching television. Bright light can reduce the production of the sleep-inducing hormone melatonin, resulting in further difficulty settling down.

* Thanks to their reproductive hormones, women undergo more sleep changes and challenges than men. Afterward, being woken by children or worrying about them can lead to sleepless nights. Many women experience trouble sleeping during menopause. Different therapies may be needed to figure out the solution for a restful night's sleep.

* Individuals can try natural remedies to induce sleep or stay asleep. In addition to good sleep hygiene and maintaining a regular sleep schedule, there are a number of herbs that can relax the body. Chamomile tea has soothing properties, and drinking chamomile tea before bed can be an effective sleep strategy. Valerian has been used as a medicinal herb since at least the time of Ancient Greece and Rome, and it can reduce anxiety and promote sleep.

Environmental factors can trigger asthma

Though many are likely familiar enough with asthma to recognize it's a respiratory disease that affects millions of people across the globe, few may know the role that environmental triggers play with regard to asthma.

Indoor allergens and irritants often trigger asthma attacks, but fortunately such triggers can be controlled by people who take a proactive approach to reducing their exposure to environmental triggers like those listed below.

Secondhand smoke

The smoke from a cigarette, cigar or pipe contains more than 4,000 substances, some of which are cancerous compounds. In addition to triggering asthma attacks in those already diagnosed with the condition, secondhand smoke is a risk factor for asthma among preschool-aged youngsters. Thanks to their diminutive statures, kids breathe more rapidly than adults, and that means they take in more secondhand smoke when around smokers than older kids or fully grown adults. But secondhand smoke is harmful to adults as well, triggering asthma attacks and increasing their risk for a variety of health conditions. Parents should not let anyone smoke near their children, and adults with older kids should avoid smokers as much as possible.

Dust mites

Tiny, invisible bugs that feed on dead skin, dust mites can be found in mattresses, pillows, carpets, stuffed toys, and clothes, among other things. Individuals who are allergic to dust mites might be susceptible to asthma if they come in contact with dust mites' body parts and droppings, and such exposure can trigger asthma in youngsters who have not previously exhibited symptoms of the condition. Bedding should be washed in hot water at least once per week and dried completely, and dust proof covers should be used on pillows and mattresses. Vacuum carpets and furniture once per week. Also, parents can reduce their kids' risk of asthma attacks by only buying stuffed toys that can be washed in hot water.

Molds

Molds live on plant and animal matter and can be found nearly anywhere that moisture is present. Inhaling mold spores, which continually float through indoor and outdoor air, can trigger an asthma attack. Mold problems in a home should be addressed immediately. Mold on hard surfaces can be removed with soap and water, and the surfaces should be allowed to dry completely before being put to use again. Use exhaust fans in rooms such as the kitchen and bathroom, where fans can be used both during and after showering.

sense of spaciousness in the great room, kitchen and dining area. Light washes in through windows that fill most of the front wall. Colorful flames in the gas fireplace can be quickly ignited to offer warmth and color when skies turn dark.

Counters rim a T-shaped kitchen outfitted with every convenience, including a tech center tucked into an alcove near the door to the garage. The raised eating bar that fronts the kitchen's L-shaped work island can double as a dining room buffet. Sliding glass doors offer easy access to the covered patio.

US home price gains slow in April amid tepid sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. home prices rose in April compared with a year earlier, but the increase was the smallest annual gain in 14 months. Price gains have slowed this year as sales have faltered.

Data provider CoreLogic said Tuesday that prices rose 10.5 percent in April from 12 months earlier. That is a healthy gain, but it is down from March's 11.1 percent increase and February's 12.2 percent rise.

pared with a year earlier. The five that did not record an increase were: Hartford, Connecticut; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Little Rock, Arkansas; Worcester, Massachusetts; and New Haven, Connecticut.

Nationwide, home prices are still 14.3 percent below the peak they reached in April 2006, when the housing bubble began to deflate. But in 23 states, prices are at or within 10 percent of their previous peaks, according to CoreLogic's figures.

Housing began to recover in 2012, but sales of existing homes stalled after mortgage rates jumped last spring. Most economists forecast that sales will barely rise this year from 2013's pace of 5.1 million. Sluggish sales, in turn, will slow annual price gains this year to roughly 5 percent or 6 percent, economists predict.

On a month-to-month basis, April prices rose 2.1 percent. But CoreLogic's monthly figures aren't adjusted for seasonal patterns, such as warmer spring weather.

Higher mortgage rates, tight credit and a limited supply of available homes have slowed the housing recovery. Sales of existing homes ticked up in April after falling to a 20-month low in March. They were still 6.8 percent lower than a year ago.

Prices rose in the 12 months ending in April in every state, CoreLogic said. The states with the biggest price gains were California, 15.6 percent; Nevada, 14.8 percent; Hawaii, 14.1 percent; Oregon, 11.8 percent; and Michigan, 11.3 percent.

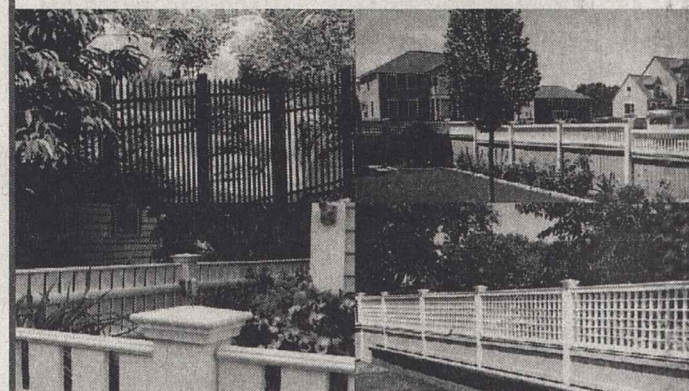

Ninety-five of the 100 largest metro areas reported higher prices in April com-
